THE TASK of educating our children has always been a delicate balance. More now than ever, as educators must provide more for the child's personal growth, as well as academic. This week, on page 3, The Pine Cone begins a two-part series on the dilemmas facing Carmel educators.

Tough campaign issues coming to the surface

Mayoral candidates Laiolo, White split on key topics

By PAUL WOLF

IN THE non-partisan arena of municipal campaigns, it can take time before candidates start carving out their differences.

In mayor's race in Carmel, where contenders include Councilman Ken White and former mayor Barney Laiolo, the differences on matters of substance as well as style have begun to emerge.

At the very least, the interviews conducted by Carmel Citizens for Good Government were elaborate enough to bring out what may have been long-standing clashes between White and Laiolo.

The election is April 14.

From the interviews, which were conducted March 17 (See related story.), these diverging viewpoints emerged:

• Whereas White noted among top budget priorities the modernization and renovation of the Sunset Cultural Center, Laiolo stated that the $1 million planned for such work is "out of line."

White said the center needs handicap access, new safety features and a bigger lobby, for starters.

But Laiolo said some fundamental improvements should be carried out, like upgrading the lavatories, enlarging the stage, but modernization plans should be dropped.

As an example, replacing the sound system isn't necessary because the existing one is already pretty good, he said.

• While Laiolo said the city should never have bought the Rio Park property, and the best use of it would now be for a city corporation yard, White is a strong advocate of plans to develop a recreation park, including a softball and soccer field, horse shoe pits and a variety of "low-energy recreation" facilities.

• White sees the development of mini-parks as worthwhile when they are well-considered and supported by residents and businesses on the street. Meanwhile,

Strasser Kauffman now blasts 'Free Our Beaches' ballot drive

By JOHN DETRO

IF ADOPTED as written, Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman warned Wednesday, the statewide Free Our Beaches (FOB) ballot initiative would damage California's network of recreational sites severely.

Her latest statement about the proposed changes, which FOB organizers are working to place on November's ballot via a widespread petition drive, represented an extreme turnaround from just a week ago.

The difference: readings of the initiative obtained by Strasser Kauffman from, she said, the legislative analyst in Sacramento and the State Coastal Commission.

"The (FOB campaign) has very good intentions," the county supervisory board's chairperson said in a phone interview, "but there are serious problems with the language of the initiative. Should it be passed by California voters in its present form, the Free Beaches Act of 1992 actually would result in higher park fees and the probable closure of state beaches in some areas."

Support withdrawn

Strasser Kauffman last week placed a

Carmel citizens group gives candidates trial by fire

By PAUL WOLF

THERE WERE four chairs in a small upstairs room at the Eastwood Building on March 17: one for a gentle interrogator named Bob D'Isidoro, two for members of the press, and one for the tense candidate.

It was a bit of a white-knuckle situation five candidates — these interviews with Carmel Citizens for Good Government. Forty-five minutes of questions, no answers prepared beforehand.

The group, formed just last month, in good part as a countervailing force to the Carmel Residents Association, has made a serious entry into Carmel's political life.

D'Isidoro is the chairman of this brand-new political action committee, whose board includes such names as Clint Eastwood, Alan Williams and Joseph Chaffers.

Character and viewpoint

With tape recorders running, candidates responded to 26 questions; a good test of character as well as viewpoint.

Some of the questions aimed at eliciting yes-no answers, like whether they consider the following businesses to be "resident-oriented": delicatessen, book store, jewelry store ...?

Other questions were more open-ended, and philosophies emerged: "I don't believe in a thousand and one committees," declared mayoral candidate

CRA says it too loves Carmel —A Pine Cone interview—

Editor's note: The following is part two of the two-part Carmel Pine Cone interview with Jim Holliday and Bob Campbell of the Carmel Resident Association.

Holliday described the CRA, now in its sixth year and boasting 476 members, as "the oldest citizens organization in Carmel." The 68-year-old Holliday currently serves as CRA president. He has a background as history teacher, museum and library director and writer.

Campbell, 64, is a past CRA officer and current member. He makes a living writing mystery and crime novels.

This second installment takes a deeper look at the issues facing Carmel, and allows the two to answer some recent criticism of the CRA.

By PAUL WOLF
PART 2

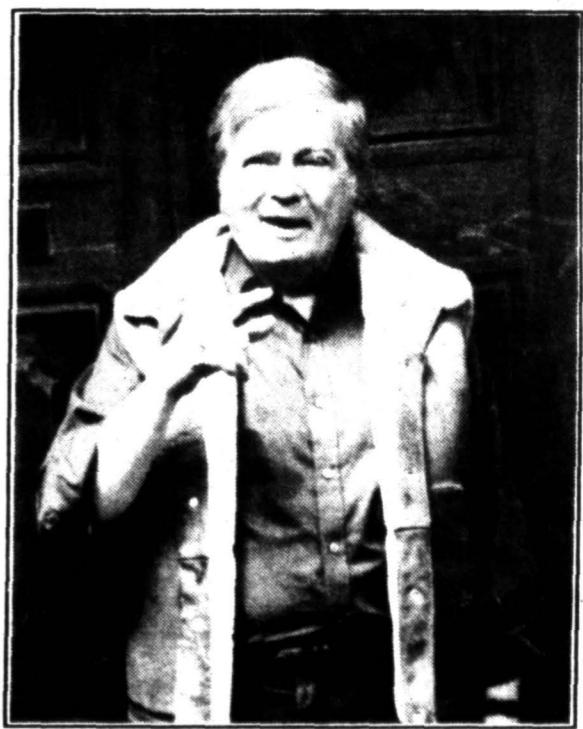

Pine Cone: How do you respond to the charge that the CRA is anti-business or is undermining the ability of businesses to function in Carmel?

Holliday: It's like that old cliche. When did you stop beating your wife? That kind of question is impossible to answer. What evidence is there? Give us some proof, any proof, that we are anti-business.

Every year we have had a series of programs that support the businesses. We give certificates of appreciation to the local businesses that we find most helpful. We sponsored a program to honor all the businesses that are more than 30 years old and are owned by the same family. We gave them plaques. We had a big special meeting for them. We meet with the CBA regularly.

We have a Citizen of the Year award. And do you know who provides all the food for that — a big table, overflowing with food? Restaurants, hotels, grocery stores, delis.

And why? La Playa Hotel, as an example, has said to us they get more thanks and public recognition from the CRA than from any other group.

BOB CAMPBELL

Pine Cone: Where do you do your major shopping?

Campbell: I do most of my grocery shopping at either Bruno's or Nielson's. I, like everybody else, when I am loading up on staples, when I am eating up reams of paper in my work, go to Costco. If I can get it for two dollars a ream, I'd look a little silly walking into a local store and paying eight."

Holliday: Belinda and I have a charge account at Nielson's. I buy my clothes in town. I go out of my way to

Voice in Reply

Dear Editor:

Speaking as the newly appointed president of the Voice of Carmel, I would like to answer Howard Skidmore's letter of March 12. He says, "Someone, not known to the public, prepares the Voice's list of questions." The people who prepare the list of questions are printed on the letterhead. The Voice of Carmel consists of eight members, each of whom has input into the process of deciding the issues and designing the survey. Every effort is made to avoid loading the questions.

"Someone, not known to the public, pays the Voice's substantial printing and postage costs." Costs are paid by a wide range of donations to the Voice of Carmel. When the next survey is mailed, probably in June, a request for donations will be part of the message.

"When the cards come back, someone, not known to the public counts the yeas and nays." The first survey was counted for us by an accounting firm on whose generosity we felt reluctant to impose the next time. Hence, the second survey was counted by members of Voice. The latest survey, because of availability of manpower, was counted by one member, Pat Sippel. The hint of cheating on this count (made not only by Mr. Skidmore but also by Jim Holliday of CRA) angers me. This tally took me approximately 8 hours; if

Mr. Skidmore or Mr. Holliday would like to recount the ballots, in my presence, I will be happy to set aside a time and place for that event. I'm wondering if Mr. Skidmore's particular interest in the ballot is because he was unable to vote since he is not a resident of Carmel.

Mr. Skidmore suggests that citizens have the opportunity to express opinions at City Council meetings. That is absolutely true. Voice of Carmel suggests that there are many citizens out there who do not like to speak in public and do not like to sit through lengthy meetings waiting for their issue to be discussed. Case in point: The Landlord-Tenant Committee Report, seven months in the making, was received and briefly discussed at 10 p.m. one Tuesday night when I and about 15 other people were still in attendance. The information contained in that report was far too important to be given such short shrift.

Voice of Carmel is not running an election; it is conducting a public opinion survey of issues that directly affect the local citizens. Our hope was that the City Council would pay some attention to those opinions. So far that hasn't been the case. We will continue to gather information about items of local concern and try to present it in an unbiased manner for consideration. We have separated our results into voters and property owners to meet the criticism of some council members who didn't think property owners had a right to an opinion.

There is no question in my mind that public interest groups such as Voice of Carmel, Carmel Residents Association, Friends of the Forest, etc., can co-exist peacefully in this community. I take exception to Mr. Skidmore thinking that Voice of Carmel is "meddling with the right of the people to speak where it counts — at the ballot box." On the contrary, Voice welcomes the exchange of ideas, particularly if it increases interest in the democratic process.

The Lone Cypress Co.

WE CONTINUE to look for bona fide gestures of goodwill coming from the Lone Cypress Company, the most recent owner of the Pebble Beach Company.

Granted, there have been courtesy calls on county supervisors and the tax assessor, social cocktails and hors d'oeuvres at the Beach & Tennis Club, one-on-one interviews with the press and a well-publicized tour of Pebble Beach Golf Links.

The Lone Cypress Company has certainly achieved its fair market share of public exposure, in fact some of our citizens seem quite content with the good guy image. We wish we could count ourselves among them, but we are not convinced that what smacks of a programmed public relations effort at imagery is enough.

At the heart of the Pebble Beach sale is money: not public relations.

As we reported in our March 12 edition, Minoru Isutani disputed the county's assessment of Pebble Beach which was based on his $842 million purchase price. The Lone Cypress Company is carrying that argument to the Monterey County Tax Appeals Board. Total taxes under appeal amount to nearly $6 million, including a county lien of $3.5 million.

At stake in the issue is money to be gained — either by the county or by the owners of Pebble Beach. On a small scale, the results of the general public's tax appeals don't make much difference to the county treasury, but the Pebble Beach issue may have serious impact on public services.

One case in point:

The Carmel Unified School District, which had to delay capital improvements after the defeat of the parcel tax measure last year, anticipated an estimated $1 million in tax money annually just from the Isutani purchase of Pebble Beach. If the Lone Cypress Company is successful in its appeal, that figure could be reduced by nearly $400,000. It is also estimated the Pebble Beach appeal will cost the county $200,000 and 45 days of hearings.

Compared to the $500 million — or is it $842 million — that was dished out for Pebble and its "intangibles" one would think a few million dollars would be a mere pitance and not worth fighting over.

We feel that if there is to be an act of public goodwill, the Lone Cypress Company could — for starters — consider the plight of local schools. If a sincere gesture is to be made by the new owners of Pebble Beach, it should be made at the bottom line and not before the appeals board.

Attention Election Letter Writers

Keeping with tradition, the Carmel Pine Cone will make every effort to publish letters endorsing candidates in the April 14 city elections. Because of space limitations, however, all letters must reach the Pine Cone offices by 5 p.m., March 31. Any letters of political endorsement arriving after March 31 will appear in the Pine Cone on a space available basis.

symphony programs and to the local jazz society.

As a testimony to the festival's keen desire to perpetuate the tradition of Dixieland music in the schools, Dixieland Monterey hosted the Carmel Marching & Chowder Society Jazz Band from Carmel High School for the second straight year. It must have been a real thrill for Dick Robins and his band to perform along with the circuit's best.

Thanks again to the Pine Cone for its solid coverage of Dixieland Monterey. Now the preparation begins for the 13th annual Dixieland Monterey, slated for March 5-7, 1993.

Dixieland Monterey

Carmel's man

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the board of directors and the many volunteers connected with Dixieland Monterey, I want to thank Pine Cone for its coverage of our 12th annual event, held March 6-8. We particularly appreciated John Detro keeping readers advised of all the festival happenings in several of his Jazz Tides columns.

Although the final figures aren't in yet, it is apparent that Dixieland Monterey set an all-time high in badge sales. Whatever the final numbers reveal, our nonprofit event will again be able to donate a portion of the proceeds back to the community for scholarships to high school and junior college music programs, local youth March 2, we at Lobos Park, listened to our six candidates, running for council and mayor. I know Ken White to be fair, full of energy. He isn't in anyone's pocket. His own man. He talks over all the issues, with interested parties — then makes up his own mind. He is a consensus builder — wishes general agreement and harmony. We need this. He has lived in Carmel most of his life, and is willing to work to help us all to keep Carmel a lovely village to live in and a profitable business community to do business in. If you have a problem, he will talk it over with you.

Only so many hours: educators must serve student and child

Editor's note: This is the first installment of a two-part special report on education in a changing world — more specifically, the dilemmas facing Carmel educators. The report looks at the double bind they find themselves in, as they are more and more responsible for the child's personal well-being as well as his or her academic achievement.

By PAUL WOLF

JUST SIX years ago, the Carmel Middle School offered a mere quarter semester of health education, which consisted of only two subjects — drug awareness and family life.

Today, among the mandatory and elective subjects, there are sections on nutrition, mental health, self-esteem, communication, problem solving, Planned Parenthood and AIDS education.

"Back then," said Principal Karl Pallastrini, the curriculum didn't reflect many of the problems that students faced."

In the midst of a minor revolution in curriculum, the dust may not be yet settled.

"The schools are turning into a quasi-therapeutic organization," declared CUSD School Board President Hilton Bialek, expressing less disapproval than concern to his board colleagues at a recent board meeting.

No one in the Carmel Unified School District disputes the fact that today's students face a variety of pressures and problems that didn't exist, were ignored or were poorly dealt with a generation ago. The debate surrounds managing curriculum, which is by definition a process of selection.

Can the schools both improve slacking academic performance and also meet the personal needs of their students? "If you squeeze one thing in, you squeeze something else out," Bialek told his board colleagues.

"If you look at academic achievement you see it is dropping. But by adding all these things, nobody is telling me what has got to go, what are the priorities. Maybe I'm old-fashioned, maybe I need educating. But the board has got to figure this out."

Time displaced

Indeed, subjects dealing with health and personal skills are now claiming 10 to 15 percent of the students' time — time would otherwise be spent with reading, writing, science and math, according to Pallastrini. "There is not getting around it — there are only so many instructional hours in a day," he said.

Debate was sparked in the Carmel Unified School District when Pallastrini came before the board March 12 proposing some changes to the middle school health curriculum. A careful look at Pallastrini's wish list shows that he is, for the most part, not asking for more for these subjects. What he is requesting is a restructuring.

Nevertheless, over one recommendation, Bialek became concerned when the

Fall LSD investigation at CHS prompts parent-notification letters

By DAVID LELAND

THE MONTEREY County Sheriff's Department has notified the parents of 27 Carmel High School students that their children may be using drugs.

The one-page letter, sent to parents periodically during the past few weeks, stemmed from last November's arrest and subsequent explosion of a CHS student charged with LSD sales.

Signed by Monterey County Sheriff Norm Hicks, the letter reads in part:

"In the course of a recent investigation, our department has come across some information regarding your child or teenager that I feel you should know," Hicks said. "This information is not in the form of an accusation. If it were more than information, someone from our office would be contacting you in a more formal manner."

The letter goes on to identify the student by name, stating "your son/daughter has used controlled substances on one or more occasions within the past year. This may be limited to marijuana or it could be marijuana and other substances as well."

According to Marvin Biasotti, CUSD director of pupil services, about six students were questioned by deputies after the CHS student was expelled last fall.

Same names

"Through the course of that investigation, the same names kept popping up," he said, adding that there is little expectation on behalf of the district on what parent reaction should be. "The parents can pursue it if they choose."

CHS Principal Marie Ishida said there have been no other expulsions or suspensions for drug use related to the letter or the November bust.

She added that the only one parent has contacted her regarding the letter, explaining the parent was more concerned with the loose evidence than anything else.

"They were concerned that their child was picked out based on hearsay," Ishida said.

While Biasotti said he sympathized with that parent, the district still was obligated to act on the data.

"It felt awkward for us to have this information and for it to sit there," he said, adding that the CUSD mailed the letter for the sheriff's department simply because it had the students' addresses. "It may or may not be accurate, but this is a reasonable approach."

Off campus use

Hicks was not available and no one else from the department would comment on the letter.

The letter told parents that most students interviewed agreed that drug use principally took place off campus — but it was occurring.

"The information we have received from...local children and teenagers from both the middle and high schools indicate a higher use...than you would suspect," Hicks said. "It was also reported that the illegal use of alcohol by students is still quite high."

Ishida said that CHS officials say they had little to do with the county sheriff's department's effort.

"I was aware the letter was going out, but I didn't know its contents," Ishida said. "I think the letter was intended to be informational; I think it was valuable."

Biasotti said the district is "closing the book" on the matter; it is not clear whether the sheriff's department will continue its investigation.

However, Ishida said she has not seen any radical changes in student behavior since the informational-letter campaign began earlier this year.

"My sense is that it's (attitude) really no different than before or after the incident," she said. "Students will go back to their same behaviors."

Entrepreneurs attempt to cash in on Carmel "900" poll

With the political season, factionalism and zoning proposals heating up the civic environment, Carmel residents are facing yet another opinion poll.

The new poll was primed by a display ad in the March 12 Pine Cone, and was scheduled to run in the newspaper again today, according to Ron Spicer, spokesperson for the advertiser, JL Enterprises.

This latest request for Carmelites' views is a business move without ties to political interest groups, the Pine Cone has learned.

Spicer, a Carmel police officer, explained that JL Enterprises is his wife Joann and their 21-year-old daughter Lisa.

"It's their thing," Spicer said. "I'm sort of an interested bystander. I guess you could call the poll a business notion with a public service element. Maybe the ad copy should've pointed out that JL Enterprises is an independent entity and not part of a bigger political survey."

The ad reads:

"Expansion of Carmel's Central Commercial Zone by eliminating the Service Commercial Zone is currently being considered. But is a zoning revision a viable solution to the problems within the business district? Some feel it is, and yet others believe there are better alternatives. What's your opinion? Do you Agree or Disagree to a revision of our current zoning system?"

Offered were separate telephone numbers (prefix 900) — one for affirmative replies and one for nays. The ad said results of the unofficial poll would be forwarded to Carmel City Council and Carmel Planning Commission. Spicer said his wife and daughter were awaiting vote totals of the first week.

The commercial aspect: each call costs $2. The local lawman explained that his wife and daughter have a one-year contract with Strauss Communications of Carmel. This "service bureau" provides prefix 900 numbers obtained from AT&T and MCI. Spicer said. From each call, both he and a Strauss spokesperson confirmed, JL Enterprises gets $1.25, Strauss 25 cents and the telephone company the balance.

It was learned through the same sources that local poll calls go into "the Strauss computer in Reno." Totals come back to Strauss and then the client.

"Politically," Spicer said, JL Enterprises "has nothing to gain. It's an independent inquiry and a business experiment."

DR. EDWARD Stachowiak deeded his Carmel Highlands home and land to the Ohlone nation last weekend. To celebrate the event, Stachowiak and representatives from the Ohlone

Ohlone nation finds a benefactor

A LOCAL physician has put his money where his convictions are and deeded his Carmel Highlands home to the Ohlone nation.

Last weekend during a brief afternoon ceremony, Dr. Edward Stachowiak, 62, formally gave his $400,000 home, located at No. 7 Yankee Point, to descendants of some of the area's first residents.

"It belonged to them in the beginning and we stole it from them," said Stachowiak, referring to the Spanish missionaries who attempted to civilize the Indians. "I hope the land goes back to them."

Known by the Spanish settlers as the Costanoan (People of the Coast), local Indians prefer to be known as the Ohlones, or Western People. The Ohlones encompassed about 40 different small tribes that spanned from San Francisco to Big Sur.

Stachowiak, a civilian physician at Fort

Ord, said he currently allows Indians to use his two-bedroom home on a half-acre of land whenever they choose.

"It's always been open for the needy," said Stachowiak, who grew up as the son of liberal parents in Pennsylvania. "My parents were very fair to all races."

As an adult, Stachowiak, who is of Polish descent, was "adopted" by the Shawnee County Nation in Pennsylvania.

The doctor, who has no direct heirs, insists that he is in excellent health, but is looking forward to his home being known as "Ohlone Place." Meanwhile, Stachowiak continues to lead a somewhat Spartan life.

"All my money over the years went to needy children, mostly Indians," said Stachowiak, who moved to the peninsula 18 years ago. "I live from paycheck to paycheck. When I leave here all I have will be the house and a $600 car."

Letters

Somehow, he finds the time.

I was very concerned when two of the candidates informed us that "WE WILL HAVE CHANGE" — "CARMEL WILL CHANGE!" Mr. Kremer, a newcomer to our village, wants to show us how to change. Mr. Laiolo is anxious to work for change. What change do they want for our village? The right for more jewelry stores, more art stores, more tee shops? Do we have enough big tourist dollars coming in daily to support more of these shops and high rents? I think not. Do we want more cars, buses, delivery trucks filling our narrow streets through this little one-square-mile of Carmel-by-the-Sea? The present shop owners do not. Nor the residents. We really are on the same side. We must be careful who we vote in. What change do they want to make? Who is their driving force? Builders? Promoters? Who will make the profit?

People from all over the world visit our village because it is more than a tourist trap. Our village still has charm, quiet ambience. We must be very careful now, for we are at the saturation point. In parking, car and truck flow, number of buses we can accommodate, in art stores, jewelry, tee shops, the tourist dollars can support, let alone the restaurants and motels. Business is having trouble paying their high rents. One 4-star restaurant I know of says they won't come to Carmel, our rents are too HIGH.

We must have a mayor and council that can work together with harmony, who recognize the danger of letting growth get out of hand.

Ken White will be a strong leader in this area. Firm yet fair. Barbara Livingston and Phil Coniglio are longtime Carmel residents with their own businesses to protect. Their motives are in harmony with both residents and business. I believe these three will work together, to resolve Carmel's conflicts. We are lucky these people, who dearly love Carmel, have come forward, offering their time, energy, intelligence, and experience to work together, to keep Carmel the charming, unique little village that it is. They will get my vote. We need them.

Five equals on council

Dear Editor:

Carmel is soon to have a new mayor and some new council members. I have a few suggestions for the new city council.

First of all, the idea of the mayor as chief executive should be abandoned.

When the city councils in the past years worked best, the mayor was a council member, conducting the business of the council meetings, seeking compromise in contested decisions, and sharing equally with the other members in appointments and recommendations. The mayor should share responsibility and seek consensus. When council members feel they have equal voice in the affairs of the city, conflict will disappear.

Jean Grace did a good job as mayor, but she was always mayor, never a council member. Her conflict with the CRA was an extension of her conflict with the minority members of the council whose views were often ignored and overridden. She tended to divide the citizens of Carmel into two groups: the "somebodies" and the "nobodies." Slight chance for consensus or harmony with that approach.

Let's hope that the new council, including the mayor, will consider themselves as five equals working for the benefit of all Carmel.

Let's harken back

Dear Editor:

"Life consists with wildness. The most alive is the wildest. Not yet subdued to man, its presence refreshes him . . . A town is saved not more by the righteous men in it than by the woods and swamps that surround it. A township where one primitive forest waves above while another primitive forest rots below, — such a town is fitted to raise not only corn and potatoes, but poets and philosophers for the coming ages." (Henry David Thoreau from his essay "Walking," 1862).

Carmel was such a town at its inception, surrounded by wildness, untamed beauty, rich with life, on every side. Its wildness was cherished by its founders, by the unpretentious group of artistic visionaries who gave it its original soul and fame. We have them to thank for our trees, for the beach without a boardwalk, for the few remaining small cottages tucked respectfully amidst the trees on some lots in town, houses which still retain some of the fragrance of that simpler, saner way of living for which Carmel was justly famous.

As the years have gone by, Carmel's unique heritage as a town conceived in love for and preservation of wild nature has been forgotten. As a town we have failed to protect our natural forest areas and all have been lost to development or tamed (i.e., Mission Trails) with one exception.

tion — Pescadero Canyon. In this canyon, on the margin of Del Monte Forest, is the last real forest in our jurisdiction, where water runs and big leaf maples grow, where deer find refreshment and hawks nest. Already some houses have been built on the canyon slopes, and we are in serious danger of losing a pivotal portion of it to development. However, the canyon can still be saved!

In Carmel city's Local Coastal Program Land Use Plan, it is mandated that available lots fronting Pescadero Canyon be acquired by the city. It is described as an Environmentally Sensitive Habitat and it also has archaeological significance, it should have been better protected.

It seems to me that Carmel is mired down in a rather petty and divisive debate, that we are swatting at gnats and swallowing camels.

Planet Earth is in critical condition, with the natural biodiversity that undergirds the whole life-support system unraveling. Can we not do our part as true Carmelites to make sure we do not lose those wild places we still have the power to save?

Shocked by CRA

Dear Editor:

Every week I am absolutely shocked by the way the Letters to the Editor section is "stacked" by the CRA members and their supporters. They sure make a lot of noise for a group that represents less than 10% of the Carmel population! And why slam the VOICE OF CARMEL polls? There isn't a more direct way of getting the real pulse of the community. And those responses numbering in the 800's and 900's represent TWICE the number of members of the CRA. If a group is so interested in the welfare of our community to spend the time and money to conduct these polls, they should be applauded.

It also amazes me that the CRA is attacking the VOICE OF CARMEL polls for the way the questions are asked. Isn't this the same group that was strong arming people at the post office just a few weeks ago with their poll taking efforts with mis-leading opening remarks like "Do you want more 'T' shirt shops in Carmel?"...and "Do you want to see the Commercial Zone increased 80%?"

For shame. I think the CRA better clean up its own act before pointing any fingers at an honest effort to see what the people really want.

But is a zoning revision a viable solution to the problems within the business district? Some feel it is, and yet others believe there are better alternatives. What's your opinion? Do you Agree or Disagree to a revision of our current zoning system?

Barney Laiolo. "If you can't make a decision, maybe there should be someone else on the job."

Or, on the subject of budget management, council candidate Phil Coniglio stressed: "I'm definitely not for $800 chairs for the police department, or $400 sheds to store things in."

Questions touched on a wide range of topics, but for at least one candidate, not wide enough.

After his interview, John Thompson, who has an extensive background in the fields of health, education and environmental activism, argued those important topics and others were conspicuous by their absence. He contends that the group's conclusions about the candidates should consider not just what they believe but what they have contributed to the community.

TWO STUDENTS from Carmel Valley High, Mandy Little and Peter Davis, are sharing their pottery skills with Carmel Unified School District preschoolers. They are doing so in an innovative program that mingles these two generally unmixed age groups. Also shown are Whitney Chao (left) and Gabriel La Mothe, from the CUSD Carmelo Child Development Center. Students and faculty alike expect the program to be long-lived, as it has so far proven itself a big success. (Paul Wolf photo.)

Laiolo objects to mini-parks, saying they would worsen the existing parking shortage. Carmel, he says, has enough parks as it is.

• Getting their fiscal outlooks into perspective, Laiolo, on one hand, Laiolo believes that the city should not pursue bond issues as a way of financing projects.

White, on the other hand, contends that shouldering new debts is acceptable so long as the city has the means to pay them off.

"I grew up on the idea that said, 'If you can't afford to buy it, don't buy it,'" declared Laiolo.

His opponent White: "The city should have proven income to make payments."

River school becomes stronghold of "green" habits

By PAUL WOLF

FATE MUST have given her that name — Mrs. Green.

She, Elaine Green, that is, is hoping to cultivate the kinds of habits you'd call green. There is plenty of reason to believe the message of this Carmel River School teacher is sinking in.

After all, her first-graders have already become warriors for the environmental cause. Consider the following:

— Boys and girls surprising her by hauling plastic bags to class — all the stuff they picked up on the way to school.

— The mom who reported she was strong-armed by her child into installing a can crusher at home.

— The row of hip-high containers right outside Greens classroom, all filled with cans, bottles and plastic items, to be recycled.

The future and the planet are theirs, and Green is hoping to develop respect and a life-long stewardship.

"I want this to be my legacy," said Green, as she surveyed dozens of books, games, photographs and videos in her classroom.

New shelves needed

Already a leader in the school's two-year-old recycling program, Green is in the process of establishing an environmental resource center at the River School Library. The only thing standing in the way is that some new shelves are needed. Once they arrive and are installed, in the coming weeks, teachers, parents and students will be able to check out the items.

For the moment, Green's Room 3 remains a miniature shrine of environmental awareness. When Green and her students are not working with these items, they just work around them.

Mentor teacher

As a mentor teacher, Green has acquired special funds to buy this assortment of goods. She has also received private donations, and contributions from FOCUS (Friends of the Carmel Unified School District), a fund-raising foundation. Close to $4,000 has gone into the collection so far.

I want this to be my legacy,
—Elaine Green

There are well-known volumes, like 365 Ways for You and Your Children to Save the Earth One Day at a Time, and plenty of artsy narratives, all, of course, with the common theme of caring and conservation.

The Great Kapok Tree, for example, is a crafty tale of an Amazon forester who gets a change of heart when he begins to cut down a Kapok tree, and the nearby animals give him a piece of their mind.

Green injects as much of her passion for the environment into her regular teaching day as possible, displaying a bit of the "Earth Day, Every Day" ethic.

Rain forest

Her pupils have written a letter to President Bush. They've "bought" pieces of rain forest. They've made a solemn "Pledge on Global Warming." They've "adopted" Tahoma, a wolf who makes a home in Wolf Haven, a Washington refuge.

The key for Green is that her pupils develop a sense of responsibility along with concern.

"We just did a unit on Whales, and I asked them, 'Who will have to save the whales?' And they answer, 'We will, we will.'"

Education: student and child

principal discussed his plan for the seventh-grade, in which Pallastrini hopes to remedy what he believes is a problem. Only one in four or five of all seventh-graders receives instruction on topics of health and personal development, as more popular electives like music and foreign language crowd in on the skills curriculum.

The principal is proposing that certain sections like nutrition, family life, mental health and HIV education be incorporated into regular seventh-grade science class.

"Through the science class," he said, "we can get to 100 percent of the kids. The seventh-grade is a life science curriculum anyway," explained Pallastrini. "We may be able to combine health issues like nutrition, family life, mental health and HIV education."

The pressing question

The pressing questions emerge: Can this practical subject matter be melded into the framework of hard academics? If so, is the student cheated or enriched?

School board member Patricia Herro offered her perspective. "I am definitely a 'touchy-feely' sort of person, but I can understand real concern about this."

The debate appears only started. District counselor Kay Anderson put her finger on the pulse of the strongest argument for aiming instruction at the whole person in addition to just the student. "Children have to be 'teachable before they can be academic,'" Anderson declared.

With the changes already wrought on middle school curriculum over the past six years, it appears the educational community has already started thinking along Anderson's lines.

Next week: A look at the role of schools, asking the question: what is public education's responsibility as compared to that of family, church and other social institutions?

Sand City best site for desal

By PAUL WOLF

PENINSULA WATER directors have learned that an old warehouse in Sand City would make the best site for the contemplated $34 million desalination plant.

Consultants with James M. Montgomery Engineers of Walnut Creek told directors March 16 that the Sand City site was preferable to two others, one in Marina and the other in Moss Landing.

The water board received the report but took no action. Directors learned that the Sand City site would make the least expensive project, potentially saving $5 million or many times more than that. There were other advantages but cost was a key factor.

The 18,000-square-foot warehouse in question is now for sale, according to Henrietta Stern, district senior project coordinator.

At last month's board meeting, Feb. 24, directors, rather suddenly, decided to postpone a June advisory vote on whether to spend $1.5-1.7 million desalination design plans. They decided they needed more time to gather information, particularly to learn about a brand-new concept for discharging brine underground.

If the brine could be discharged right next to the desalting plant, instead of having to be piped above ground eight miles to the sewer plant in Marina, that would be a savings to the district millions of dollars.

Ending moratorium

In other business, the water board began paving the way for ending the moratorium on new water hookups.

At its last meeting, the board approved an allocation formula for the new water to be generated by the Paralta well in Seaside, which is scheduled to go on line by June 1. The allocation set the stage for the lifting of the moratorium.

What the board did Monday is set a public workshop to study changing the regulations on water connections. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 6, at Colton Hall in Monterey.

It also set a public hearing on the related ordinances for the regular water board meeting, starting at the same time and place, April 20.

Carmel man arrested on burglary charge

AN 18-YEAR-OLD Carmel man is in county jail on a burglary charge involving property valued at more than $20,000, according to police.

Canyon LaGrone was arrested Wednesday, March 11, after being connected with burglarizing the apartment of a Carmel businessman, who lives on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh Avenue, according to Carmel Det. Pete Poitras.

In addition, a 16-year-old Carmel resident is in custody at juvenile hall, charged with possession of stolen property, accused of harboring cameras, a compact disk player and numerous other items taken from the victim's home, according to Poitras.

The victim had been out of the country for over a week, returning to a ransacked apartment. "There was considerable damage done to the interior," said Poitras.

The investigation, which began right after the report March 5, showed the burglar "had prior knowledge" the victim would be away. Police connected fingerprints to the eventual suspect, a parole who had a record for similar crimes.

"It just appeared as they this apartment was not struck at random," Poitras said.

The suspect was arrested in front of Devendorf Park.

Pen Med gives Carmel Regional Ambulance 90-day contract notice

By DAVID LELAND

CITING FINANCIAL and management difficulties, Peninsula Paramedics Services, Inc., has given 90-day notice that it plans to cancel a personnel contract with Carmel Regional Ambulance.

As the sole provider of paramedic service for CRA, Peninsula Medics took in about $500,000 from the contract last year, which puts the company in the red, according to Brian Sinnott, president.

The contract was expected to expire Jan. 2, 1994.

Sinnott said it costs his company about $403,000 in salaries and benefits alone for the nine paramedics it leases to CRA. Plus there is added administrative expenses to be considered.

However, Gary Carmichael, secretary to the CRA board of directors, told The Pine Cone that he questioned how extensive Pen Med's losses are.

CRA contract terms

"When a private company says it's losing money that's a tax statement," he said. "How many millionaires lose money?"

Under the contract with CRA, Pen Med leases paramedics to the district so it can meet the county's mandate of providing paramedic service in all its ambulances.

Carmichael said the CRA board of directors will meet this week to consider its options, but he left the door open that Sinnott may simply be playing cat and mouse in seeking to renegotiate his deal.

South County deja vu

"I suspect we are in negotiations now," Carmichael said. "Peninsula Medics has done things similar to this two times in south county and they are still operating there."

Last year Peninsula Medics garnered about $280,000 in reimbursement from its personnel contracts with Soledad and King City.

Emergency Medical Services Administrator Chris LeVenton confirmed that Pen Med had extended its contract, which expired Dec. 31 of last year, for four years in south county, but that benefits to the ambulance company were not financial.

But Sinnott maintained that the principal problem is one of logistics.

"It's difficult to be responsible for paramedics when they are 15 miles away in a stranger's building," he said, referring to the mileage from Pen Med's Sand City offices to fire departments where the paramedics are stationed.

'Free Our Beaches' drive

pro-FOB resolution on the agenda for supervisors' regular meeting Tuesday. On Monday, word came from her staff that the resolution would be pulled off the agenda. She told board colleagues during the session why she had killed the supportive statement.

Based in Fort Bragg, the FOB movement needs the signatures of 460,000 registered voters by April 17 to qualify the initiative for the November ballot. That effort evolved after California lawmakers and Gov. Wilson told State Parks and Recreation in late 1990 to make up $16 million in budget cuts through public play area user fees. The coastal commission approved installation of 16 "iron ranger" fee collection devices at state beaches (none on or near Monterey Bay).

FOB literature says the Free Beaches Act would eliminate day use fees (parking costs included) at all state beaches, limit fees at other state parks "to the real costs of maintaining each facility," raise new parks funds through "a modest increase in the optional personalized license plate registration fee."

The ax fell

Strasser Kauffman originally said she would carry FOB petitions herself since "there's no higher priority for our area than the protection of coastal access." But then the requested analyses came back to her office — and the ax fell.

"Normally," the supervisor said, "I would have obtained the analyses before placing that resolution on the agenda. Because of the (April 17) deadline, I did the agenda item first. Of course I withdrew the item. There's no way I could have the board get involved in something so problematical. I'm a little surprised that others who've voted support (Carmel City Council passed a pro-FOB resolution unanimously on Jan. 7 of this year) apparently didn't ask for an analysis."

Last week's Pine Cone article on the FOB drive, Strasser Kauffman said, "was very clear and helpful in its presentation of both sides. And then the analyses demanded quick action. For example, the initiative would cancel all day use fees at state beaches, including Southern California beach fees that have been in place for 50 years. I discussed the point carefully with Don Murphy (new state parks chief who formerly ran this division from the Big Sur spread). In effect, the loss of revenue could force closure of remote northerly beaches — like, yes, Big Sur."

Skyrocketing fees?

If state park fees were raised to cover the real costs of maintaining each facility, as the initiative suggests, "the fees would go up astronomically," Strasser Kauffman said. "They (FOB backers) don't seem to know that maintenance funds now come from other places in the budget. If places had to raise their own maintenance money, the cost of using the state sites would be outrageous."

The first information packet from FOB leader Mary Pjerrou "looked very good," Strasser Kauffman continued. "But I need to say at this point that, my goodness, we don't want the system to collapse. The wording of the initiative would not 'free our beaches' — it would increase fees and cause those closures. I hope we can work together to review this language and deal with the initiative's severe problems. I don't think the present (FOB package) can or should qualify for the November ballot."

Another route, she said, would be to work for "a legislative solution. The (FOB) movement is positive since it sends a certain signal from the public to our lawmakers."

Murphy trusted

Strasser Kauffman expressed faith in Murphy's formation of a blue ribbon committee on alternative funding sources: "I really think Don wants to get away from these state beach user fees. Right now, we need to make sure that the (FOB) initiative doesn't backfire."

She said she would contact supervisors of "other coastal counties. We need to pursue legislative action immediately. The beaches must remain free."

Reached by phone Wednesday morning, Carmel Mayor Jean Grace said she would have no comment on the FOB initiative "until I know what she (Strasser Kauffman) is talking about. I don't know where she's coming from. In the fullness of time, we'll all make our statements."

Is the CRA hypocritical?

clothes in town. I go out of my way to buy my books in Carmel. I buy my newspapers, the New York Times every Sunday, at the local drug store. Drugs I buy here. We eat in town frequently.

This is another red herring — that the CRA is hypocritical: that we seem to be in support of the residents but we're seen at the Safeway, or we're seen over at Macy's, as if that is some kind of distortion in what we believe in.

We go to the movies here. The Golden Bough was in trouble, and United Artists was threatening to close that theater down. We thought, "This is such a wonderful theater." Big room with a big screen. I said, "This is one of the best theaters I've ever been in. Let us help you."

So we passed out cards among our members. We sent them out to United Artists, saying, "The Golden Bough is one of the best theaters on the Monterey Peninsula, and we want you to keep it and maintain it and take care of it. The CRA did that. We do that kind of thing all the time.

Pine Cone: First, how can the city sort out resident-serving businesses from visitor-serving businesses? And second, how can small, local-serving businesses survive with all the high rents?

Holliday: To suggest that we don't know what a resident-serving business is — that is a rather strange befuddlement on the part of the planning commission. They say they don't know. It is written in the general plan. The general plan defines what resident-serving businesses are.

Campbell: I think it comes down to this: any business whose loss would create a hardship to some degree on the residents who live in the town is by definition a resident-serving business.

Holliday: Shoe repair. Laundry.

Cleaning. Haircuts. Lawyers. Doctors. Drug stores.

Campbell: There are some businesses that lap over, or are on the fringe. What we are trying to avoid is the look of another shopping mall that you can find anywhere in the United States. The same shops, just lined up.

Pine Cone: Where do you stand on the Hatton Canyon Freeway?

Holliday: We are opposed to the Hatton Canyon Freeway. But we have to put in the other side of the coin. We are in support of helping to alleviate the traffic problems on Highway 1, and therefore we are in favor of widening Highway 1. Also we are in favor of an underpass or an overpass at Carmel Valley Road and at Rio Road.

Pine Cone: How about mini-parks in the downtown?

Holliday: The mini parks are established for many reasons. First, they enhance the property values of adjacent buildings. Furthermore, some have been created for safety reasons. For the one on Dolores, they took a parking space away and created a mini-park. The reason they did that: cars parked in that space would back into a pedestrian crosswalk, and pedestrians had actually been bumped by cars.

Also, we are in favor of the esthetic value of increasing the number of trees. If the trees in the downtown aren't replaced soon, they are all going to die off because they have a certain lifetime. So we want to replace some of those tall trees, and the only place to do it is in mini parks.

Pine Cone: The proposed zoning change of the downtown, repealing the service-commercial district?

Campbell: We are opposed to it, unless it goes through the proper process. We are not trying to impose our ideas on anybody. It can go through the proper process. The mayor has to call for a committee that will examine the general plan, because of the ordinances and regulations flow from the general plan. If they want to clean the edges of these districts — and we have no objection to that — then they'd better get with it and go to process.

Holliday: And if there is a decision to change the zoning rules, that's fine. We'll accept that.

Campbell: And at that time, we may well mount a campaign against that. That is our right.

Pine Cone: Speak a little about some of the criticisms you've had over the CRA petition against the zoning change, like soliciting signers from outside of Carmel proper.

Holliday: There was no "soliciting." We stood in public places, and asked people — as all petitioners do — if they were interested in signing. Now the people who signed it are — whoever signs it. We didn't push them into it.

Campbell: It must be made very clear that the people who live within the area that is traditionally considered the Carmel sphere of influence, their names were allowed to remain on the petition. Those people who were visitors from Salinas, Monterey, Pacific Grove or elsewhere were taken off.

Holliday: Nine-hundred and twelve people signed the petition and approximately 700 of them lived in Carmel. All of the 911 lived within the sphere of influence.

We have been accused of lying or distortion in this petition ... Now here is a map that is directly based on the information that was received from the planning staff (Holliday presents a map). This is the increase (of the commercial district) that we were opposed to. It says 70 percent. It was corrected later, when the staff said, "No, it's 62 percent, not 70 percent."

We have had petitions brought to the public for 50 years in this town. When people opposed the paving of Ocean Avenue, they had petitions. We are just following an old custom of circulating petitions in this community.

Carmel Valley Outlook

Key policy to Carmel Valley Master Plan is overlooked

By SUSAN BECK

IT'S 1992 and Hatton Canyon Freeway is no where near being constructed, if it ever will be, so, why hasn't the Monterey County Board of Supervisors considered a limited moratorium on development?

That's what puzzles Robert Greenwood, who was a member of the original Carmel Valley Master Plan committee.

According to Greenwood, Policy 39.1.6 of the Carmel Valley Master Plan states that after five years of allocation the board must review the local level of traffic service on Carmel Valley Road and the status of the Hatton Canyon Freeway.

"If the freeway is not being built," added Greenwood, "the policy requires the board to limit further development until the freeway is under construction." The master plan was adopted in 1986.

"It seems to me a more cut and dry call for limiting development," said Greenwood, who was a member of the original master plan committee.

The option now being implemented is the master plan's Policy 39.3.2.1, which states that if the level of service drops below the level acceptable under the Carmel Valley Master Plan on any segment of Carmel Valley Road, the county, at the minimum, must not approve development without an Environmental Impact Report on traffic, said Greenwood.

This option is arguable. It never really made clear whether the improvements actually needed to be implemented or if it was enough to just establish a guarantee of improvements before development can be allowed to proceed.

The Hatton Canyon policy, said Greenwood, "seems

CARMEL VALLEY High's Mandy Little, who clashed with the school district this past week, stands where a parking lot is set to be installed.

to have been overlooked by everybody. I don't know why." He added that looking back, however, "it was written without a great deal of forethought because at that time we weren't aware of all the traffic complications. It could have been written a little more flexibly."

CUSD willing to work with Carmel Valley High students

By PAUL WOLF

THE DUST is beginning to settle following a clash between Carmel Valley High School and Carmel school district officials over plans to develop a recreation field and parking lot next to the school.

Mandy Little, a Carmel Valley High senior and student representative to the CUSD school board, told trustees March 12 that her classmates were "not only shocked but very angry" that her school wasn't informed about the district's plans.

Principal Blake Fuessinich echoed those sentiments but in gentler terms: "There wasn't the communication and inclusion we normally enjoy," he said.

School officials now say that kind of "communication snafu" won't happen again, as CUSD Supt. Vance Baldwin put it.

Little said the students object particularly to plans for a 40-space parking lot that would be put in just yards away from school buildings. Moreover, she said the vegetation plan "would barricade our school in shrubs and bushes."

Little is hoping for some compromises, perhaps on the size and exact location of the parking lot, and on the vegetation plan. Although the initial plans have been drawn up by a district-hired architect, Baldwin said they are "still subject to modification."

The superintendent said he understands the plans to call for 22 spaces initially, with the addition of nine later.

While the district is footing the bill for the designs, funds for the project itself will be raised by community groups, who will also benefit from the three baseball diamonds, soccer play field and jogging track.

At the board meeting, Little suggested her fellow students seek more than an apology. "The commotion hasn't died down. If anything, it has increased. And we plan to fight this."

Carmel Valley Rotary Club

BIG THANK you's to the Carmel Valley Rotary Club for taking such an interest in supporting the entire community! Since 1973, the C.V. Rotary Club has been raising money for the benefit of the residents of Carmel Valley. Grant Morrill, president of the C.V. Rotary Club considers "our service to the community as a responsibility that we have to give something back to the community where we live and work."

The Rotary Club, which consists of 50 business, professional, and clergy members from throughout Carmel Valley, is constantly "giving back." Rippling River, the Hospice, Carmel Valley High School, Carmel High, and the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center (CVCYC) have all benefited from their generosity. The students at Carmel Valley High will be able to construct a large telescope to modify and expand their science study program, thanks to the Rotary. For the past 10 years, the top 100 academic students of Carmel High School have been honored with a dinner and recognition certificates. In the past, the Rotary provided playground equipment for the CVCYC. Each year, the CV Rotary Club sponsors an inbound as well as outbound exchange student to a foreign country.

A night on Cannery Row

A BOOZY panhandler made his way north on Cannery Row, bouncing in the dark from one rejection to another like the silver orb in a pinball machine. He followed a black cat across the street in the deserted block just before Ed Rickett's weathered lab. Frogs croaked in the night, harkening ghosts from the past.

The street hiker pulled his faded denim fisherman's cap down over his ears against the winter chill. He weaved and bobbed like a moth as he zeroed in on the golden light flowing from the mustard-florescent La Ida Cafe and lurched inside, only to be put out into the night by the owner, Kalisa. The slam of the La Ida front door echoed off the walls of the aquarium buildings next door as the man trudged up the hill in the direction of Nob Hill market.

Just as Kalisa locked her door a phalanx of business men emerged from the darkness, walking up the row from the vicinity of the old Neal De Vaughn restaurant. They followed the footsteps of the panhandler but passed La Ida, turning as one and marching through the black metal gates into the member's entrance of the Aquarium.

Strobe lights flashed in their eyes and a ghostly bright light illuminated Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh as he and his entourage were met by Julie Packard who was waiting to greet them in a jade green dress.

His Royal Highness took Julie's hand and said, "Thank you for letting us in."

SIGNS OF LIFE

Local scenic photographer Steve Crouch once said, "If the people came back who were here when I was here, they'd probably be thrown out of town."

Why? The peninsula has become rather stodgy.

Face it, there aren't as many bohemians around as there used to be. Instead of waiting to be thrown out, many left on their own. Others died, some went Republican and none of them could afford today's rent.

But there are hints of change in the spring breezes. In one short week the POP (predictable old peninsula) witnessed the following: Next to nude men and women raging to the beat of Brazilian drums at the Monterey Conference Center, His Royal Highness Prince Philip AND Mickey Mouse visiting Cannery Row, the Cheese Carving Challenge at Highlands Inn, Alligator's Acoustic Trio at Portofino, a Moroccan bash at La Playa Hotel and only one silent auction.

But that's just the beginning. In months to come, we'll see the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art hold a party honoring the Grand Bohemians, the inaugural Monterey Peninsula Housekeeping Challenge with events like toilet paper basketball and, hold on to your hats, Queen Ida and her Zydeco Band in a romping Halloween celebration at Sunset Center.

It's a heady start but we still have a way to go to match the eccentricities of the old bohemians. In his book In Search of Something Herb Cerwin, former public relations man for S.F.B. Morse, writes about a party Salvador Dali threw on the eve of World War II at Hotel Del Monte (now the Naval Postgraduate School).

Dali called his soiree "A Night in a Surrealist Forest" and brought in animals from Fleishhacker Zoo in San Francisco, the largest bed in Hollywood, naked store mannequins outfitted with animal heads, pine trees from Del Monte forest and a nude woman who was sedated so she could lay prone in a wrecked car throughout the evening. One of the dinner courses was served out of satin slippers. The guest list included Ginger Rogers, Bob Hope and Robinson Jeffers.

CELEBRITY CHALLENGE

Today's guest lists don't sport celebrity names like they did in the old days, much to the chagrin of local fund raising groups. The celebrity issue that surfaced earlier this year in this column may have come and gone, but in its wake the larger question of celebrity-themed events on the entire peninsula is lurking around the corner waiting to be addressed.

The Monterey Peninsula has been the playground of the rich and famous for years. Archives are filled with photos of movie stars and heads of state who came here to frolic. The public regarded them as gods and goddesses of the silver screen but from their lofty heights they graciously agreed to be photographed and made impromptu appearances at local events.

Today's celebrities are commodities. Their appearance fees range upwards from $10,000 to $90,000 and anytime they are photographed you can be sure there is a public relations campaign involved. If not, they demand complete anonymity.

Events and festivals that still want the big names must have deep pockets or a connection wired directly to the star. Most won't donate their time to a cause unless they're personally motivated or influenced by a friend or colleague.

What's the answer to the peninsula's celebrity challenge? Should we revamp our events or look for some hungry celebrities?

PEEPS

Petie and Bob Helfrich and June and John Phillips are among the hosts and hostesses who are participating in the "Legal Services for Seniors" "Private Affairs."

Their affair is an afternoon luncheon with Emile Norman for a few people who will be chauffeured to the Big Sur home of the artist for a gourmet lunch. One of the guests will be the recipient of an original work of art by Emile. For more information call 372-3989.

David Armanasco auctioned off $32,000 worth of local wines at the Monterey Wine Country Associates event held in conjunction with the Monterey Wine Festival.

Included were a hand carved wooden wheel of magnums created by Tom Ewen of Carmel Valley. Bill Naegle of Minneapolis, Minn. bought the wheel to display in his restaurant.

Allen Funt is scheduled to serve as the master of ceremonies at the Big Sur Firehouse Dedication Ceremonies slated for May 2.

The Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade, in its 17th year, is supported entirely by the local community. The entire $500,000 Fire House project is being funded through donations from private individuals including Honorary Chairman, David Packard.

Signed tap shoes belonging to Paula Abdul will be among the prizes donated to the Monterey County AIDS Project Academy Awards Night. The grand prize is a trip for two to the 1993 Oscar's Ceremony. Other prizes include a portrait of Arnold Schwarzenegger, a two-day stay at Esalen and a Walt Disney animation cel of Alice and the Mad Hatter.

Ed Broderick donated his time and materials and matted and framed the art created by pre-schoolers from Carmel Bay School for their annual fund raiser held at New Master's Gallery in Carmel. Approximately 25 art works were purchased by the kid's parents.

express their inner-most thoughts about the peninsula.

They call Carmel one of God's masterpieces, an incredible romantic place for a honeymoon. Christmas eve was particularly moving for this woman.

"On Christmas eve, at the western most corner of this balcony of Room 27, I accepted a proposal of marriage to Dennis.

"We have wandered the plant for a millennium searching for each other; each living separate lives and dreaming fervent dreams of things to come. Now, finally, we can rest.

In early February a jilted lover writes:

"The most beautiful and romantic place I've ever seen. Next time I'll come with someone who can appreciate being here with me! Could have been great." - Lori F.

This was written on Valentines Day:

"If Lori F. (see preceding page) ever gets back to this room again...I do hope she takes her own advice. A little over 23 years ago I brought my bride here. This weekend we came back to share Valentines weekend together. A beautiful room, a beautiful woman, a beautiful weekend." - Rick

Carmel Valley park will open to bicyclists

WITHIN THE next few weeks bicyclists will again enjoy using the myriad of trails in Carmel Valley's Garland Ranch Regional Park.

In 1987 bicyclists were prohibited from using the park's trail system, but on March 11, after several months of drawn out debate, the Monterey County Planning Commission approved an expanded use permit for the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, which allows for mountain bikes in the Cooper Ranch section of the park.

The decision came after two and half hours of interrogation by the commission of the park district's manager, Gary Tate, board member Zad Leavy, and the district's president, Dina Stansbury.

In addition, several valley residents offered their thoughts on which direction the commission should take on the controversial subject of bicyclists mingling with pedestrians and equestrians throughout the park.

After the vote, Commissioner Tom Glau said that he was disturbed with the amount of time and energy that the commission had dedicated to subject.

"We have elected officials for the district, and I think that they are the people that really need to reflect the community. We are here to see that environmental issues are met and to ensure that development conforms with the county's general plan and area plans," said Glau. "We got one helluva long ways from that."

Proposed C.V Road traffic light hits snag

COUNTY SUPERVISORS this week delayed public approval of a $135,000 computerized traffic signal proposed for the intersection of Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1.

Opponents of the project say that signalization would actually worsen traffic in the area, which currently relies on courtesy in allowing cars to turn left onto Carmel Valley Road from Highway 1.

Despite leading the bandwagon for the signal, which would be funded in part by Caltrans, 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman pulled back from the issue during this week's board meeting.

"Let's just put it on hold," she said.

In two weeks supervisors will conduct a public meeting at which time an on-screen model of the county's traffic projections will be available.

CVVIC founding member is the new president of Sheriff's Advisory Council

By SUSAN BECK

ROGER WILLIAMS has been selected president of the Monterey County Sheriff's Advisory Council (SAC).

Peter Coakley, president of the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC), made the announcement at the March 13 meeting held at Los Laurels Lodge in Carmel Valley.

"I think it's great, and I'm proud to have been selected. It will be a hard act to follow Haber. He did a magnificent job of putting it together, and provided tremendous financial assistance," said Williams. Ed Haber is the outgoing president of SAC.

The advisory council was established eight years ago and has 220 members. Monterey County Sheriff Norman Hicks is the council's chairman.

There are two volunteer groups within the organization, Search and Rescue has 15 members, and the Sheriff's Emergency Assistance Team (SEAT) has 35 members.

Both groups serve as an auxiliary to the sheriff's department. Search and Rescue volunteers directly assist the sheriff's search and rescue team. For example, they will help to rescue someone who has fallen into the ocean at Point Lobos or search for victims of a plane that has crashed.

The SEAT volunteers are usually called out to help in natural disasters such as an earthquake, assisting with traffic at street crossings and handling evacuations.

"I'm tremendously proud of the officers and directors from both branches for all the things they have done. I am looking forward to being active with each group," said Williams.

It cost about $1,900 to properly equip each volunteer, and the advisory council's job is to provide the equipment.

"SAC is looking for contributions," said Williams, who didn't hesitate to take charge as leader of the council by soliciting the committee. "These fellows take some chances that I wouldn't want to do even if I were their age. Anyone who can spare a few bucks is welcome."

CV Master Plan

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman said that the policy referred to by Greenwood "has not been overlooked."

She said that last year Monterey County's Public Works Department and Planning Commission alerted county counsel that the policy needed to be addressed at some time.

"This is the key policy of the Carmel Valley Master Plan," said Strasser Kauffman. "The two agencies have been working together and have had several discussions on the subject."

She added that the policy was not as "cut and dry" as Greenwood stated because five years of allocation is actually five years "worth" of allocation.

Translated that means allocation allows for 37 new sub-division units per year, which hasn't happened.

"Carmel Valley is moving more slowly than was anticipated, and there hasn't been five years of allocation because of the water moratorium, other restrictive policies in the master plan, and the subdivision's evaluation process," said Strasser Kauffman.

Legal comment

County Counsel, Doug Holland, reiterated that allocation has not reached its maximum, which is 185 units for five years.

"There have been about 50 to 60 projects approved, and only a few have been built," said Holland.

When asked about Pacific Meadows, a Carmel Valley retirement community consisting of 200 units, Holland said, "Low and moderate income housing is exempt as part of our obligation under state law to provide affordable housing. To address that we have to loosen up development standards."

"The major issue in this type of project is the cost of land in the valley, which is probably the most significant restraint to seeing any further low-income housing being built. The land for Pacific Meadows was donated, there weren't any land costs," said Holland.

"The issue is we are still dealing with one road regardless of how you handle it. County counsel and public works recommended to impose a moratorium to provide time to put together a financing

But, I'm not attracted to her

I RECENTLY attended a lecture at Pilgrim's Way Book Store (Dolores and Sixth). The guest speaker was Rick Moss; the lecture was entitled Oneness, Intimacy, and Sexuality. I, of course, was thinking in astrological terms of SATURN, VENUS, MARS and PLUTO.

Since I arrived early, Rick and I talked about his work and I explained that I was there to glean information for the couples I've been counselling. I told him about a strange syndrome — how many of my male clients constantly talk about women saying, I'm not attracted to her, why should I date her?

Rick had this irritable twinkle in his eyes as he replied, "Two ego's cannot have an intimate relationship," and especially if one partner is in an emotional turmoil with their own baggage.

I felt like I'd been hit on the head with a spiritual 2x4. Of course, my clients were talking about "packaging" (penises, vaginas), not love but attraction, judgment, Ego. I often wonder if one were blind how they would see their attractions? The lecture was an eye-opener. I only wish ALL of you could have been there.

As Rick spoke, I thought of how my clients relate to their attractions, which could be another term for addictions; to attract an Aries, start a fire or yell for help. With a Taurus male, it's important to be on the cover of Sports Illustrated's bathing suit issue, or if he's mature, just set the table, and don't forget the candlelight and roses.

Gemini students like to have someone carry their books and Cancer wants to cook for you at home, as they make love through the food they prepare for you. With Leo, just build a stage and sit in front. Virgo insists you be both polite, neat and on time, while Libra says all you have to do is simply exist and Scorpio runs away quickly in his mysterious black shroud.

Sagittarius loves it when you ask him questions and Capricorn has you wait in his office. You can meet Aquarians in groups and you can attract a Pisces if you look homeless, like you need help.

If you want to get rid of an Aries, just wait a minute, with Taurus ask for a loan. Say boring things to a Gemini and you're history. Likewise is you break something in a Cancer's home. Criticize Leo and he will disappear like magic. To be abandoned, sneeze on a Virgo's designer suit and insist Libra make all the decisions. I DARE you to ask them to order for you in a restaurant.

Scorpios are too ignorant even to get insulted; you can't, don't even try, they simply won't go away. Ask for a commitment from a Sagittarius and they'll be sure to leave on a jet plane to a sunny spot like Spain. Be different with Capricorn, he hates it. Tell Aquarians you're a racist/sexist and watch his facelift droop. With Pisces, just make LOUD noises.

As Rick says, "If you want to see what you really want, look at what you've got." Do you really know what you're doing to yourself? We live in an addictive society (Neptune) and under the illusion (Neptune) that thin is in, and that the prettier the packaging the happier you'll be. It's not until Saturn comes in for a landing on your Moon, Venus or Mars that you begin to question your false beliefs.

We are nearly always unconsciously drawn to that which we lack; an element of air (Gemini, Libra, Aquarius), water (Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces), earth (Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn) and fire (Aries, Leo, Sagittarius) almost inevitably draws to themselves their opposites, because these relationships provide opportunities to develop individual integration.

When someone attempts to remodel you, he is really trying to remodel himself, but how many of us respond well to criticism? So why can't we share our differences? Recognize each other's worth, through kindness, caring and respect. We cannot do this if we reject and fear our own inferiority.

Earth can learn to live with, and learn from, his watery partner only when he is willing to experience his senses at their deepest level and acknowledge vulnerability and confront his own deep longing for love. Water can learn from water too when he stops intellectualizing everything by living in his head day after day, forgetting his inner feeling needs and finally recognizes that human relationships are just as valid as his ideas.

Fire too can learn from water, how to be unselfish. Besides, they need a good dousing from time to time when they get "out of control."

I remember many cozy, warm evenings curled up by the fire, spent with poet, Rod McKuen (Taurus) years ago, when he would tell me, "Carol, it's not WHO you love, or HOW you love, but THAT you love." Rick Moss revived those moments for me, thanks Rick!

J.A., female, Carmel; born July 11, 1941 with a Capricorn Ascendant, Scorpio Midheaven and Moon in Pisces. Is there any significance of the solar eclipse on my birthday last year? I was in Kona, Hawaii for this event.

C.H. It's obvious you know something about astrology, since you know where all the important stuff is. A solar eclipse is a NEW MOON (the time to start new things. It's when the Sun and Moon "kiss" each other in the same sign). This was not the ONLY significant time in your life. Here's a list of other eclipses in Cancer; the one on July 11, 1991 was in 18-degrees of Cancer, but what about: July 9, 1945 - 16 degrees Cancer; July 11, 1953 - 18 degrees Cancer; July 9, 1964 - 17 degrees Cancer; July 10, 1972 - 18 degrees Cancer.

These eclipses fall in your Solar first house and in your timed chart, the seventh house, each had a six-month influence and generated sensitivity and feeling, not to mention residential moves, decorating your present dwelling and marriage, maybe a new hair-do? There was a potential for a major event that proved to be a milestone in your life. Time to focus on human interaction, especially on a one-to-one basis and with the public.

A sense of incompleteness (self) nudges you to look for a mate if you're not married or if you are, to recognize his needs as well as your own. Are both of you satisfied with yourselves? Meaningful relationships are to be found in the seventh house that include marriage, business partners to strengthen relationships, as unfulfilling ones will tend to evaporate (Cancer).

To balance between self and relating is the key to these eclipses for you, personally. Fulfill your own needs first, however, and then in the relationship.

After all, love is two people stronger together than either one is apart.

Got a comment, joke, want to ask a question or just say hi, I want to make an appointment for a consultation. Keep in mind I make house calls; call 624-2881 or write to me at: P.O. Box 223825, Carmel, California 93922.

"I think, in my opinion, the imposition of a fee program to financing Carmel Valley Road improvements is in fact a restriction on development. Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

The Great American Meatout

HAVE YOU ever thought of becoming a vegetarian? Well, today, March 19, is the Great American Meatout. Now that doesn't mean you have to give up poultry and fish, but why not try one day without red meat?

My diet is also varied with lots of pastas, fresh fruits and vegetables, rice and grains, and I truly feel better — physically and emotionally — since I've changed my eating habits. You don't have to live on weeds and seeds to enjoy a meatless diet, so go on, try it! For one day — join the Great American Meatout!

ANIMAL EXPERIMENTATION

Every year, millions of animals die in the world's laboratories. Many of these animals could be saved, and more reliable results achieved, through the use of human tissues in research, testing and education. Human tissue studies could produce new insights into many illnesses and provide an alternative means of testing the safety of medicines and other substances.

If you'd like to know more about this very important subject, there's an excellent pamphlet available through the American Anti-Vivisection Society. It's called HUMANE ISSUE and you can order a free sample copy by writing to the American Anti-Vivisection Society, 801 Old York Rd., Suite 204, Jenkintown, PA 19046.

ARTHRITIC JOINTS

An older cat that doesn't jump and frolic any more may have arthritic changes in his joints and back. Aging cats develop spurs on bone at the edges of joints as a result of normal wear and tear. Common signs include discomfort and stiff movement, and especially a reluctance to squat or jump.

If you suspect that your cat may be suffering from arthritis, be sure to see your veterinarian. Aspirin and other "human" drugs can be toxic to your cat, so let your vet prescribe safe medication.

ALLERGY ALERT

Allergy season is here and pets can suffer as much as their owners. Watery eyes and runny noses are commonly caused by allergies, but they could also be a symptom of a more serious problem, so be sure to have your veterinarian decide what treatment to follow.

CONTROLLING PUPPY PARASITES

Most dogs will become infected with internal parasites at some time in their lives and puppies are especially vulnerable.

Roundworm and hookworm larvae can be transmitted through the mother's blood before birth or through her milk during nursing; in fact, by the time a puppy is two weeks old, young adult worms may be present in the intestine.

These parasites can rob animals of their vitality and make them more susceptible to other health problems. So if you have a puppy, be sure to have him checked for parasites as a part of his regular veterinary care.

WE GET LETTERS...

Q. I know that you advocate spaying and neutering and I'm almost convinced — but will it change my dog's personality? I've heard they become heavy and lethargic after that surgery.

A. Any change in your pet's personality will be the result of a natural maturing. Weight gain can occur because your pet may require fewer calories. For instance, a male dog that is fighting and carousing needs more calories than after he is neutered and is content to stay close to home. The amount of food should be adjusted depending on the level of activity and rate of metabolism. A regular exercise program is beneficial for two-leggers and four-leggers, so try making a nice, brisk walk with your doggy a part of your daily routine.

Q. A few weeks ago, you stated in your column that chocolate can be poisonous to dogs. What about the chocolate-flavored dog treats in pet stores? Are they all right to feed to my dog? I've also seen dog biscuits dipped in white chocolate. Is white chocolate harmful?

A. The chocolate flavor in most dog treats comes from carob. Carob does not contain theobromine, the toxic ingredient found in chocolate.

There are different formulations of white chocolate and the important ingredient is cocoa butter. According to our veterinary source, white chocolate that contains no cocoa butter should pose no problems for dogs. To be safe, though, I would stay away from chocolate altogether.

HIGH-RISE WARNING

Upper-story window ledges and balconies can be dangerous lounging spots for cats and dogs. Ruptured lungs, broken bones or teeth, and torn spleens or bladders are some of the injuries animals have sustained in accidents such as falls from high levels. Please don't put your pets in jeopardy. Keep your windows screened or closed and supervise your pet when he's taking a siesta on the terrace.

See you next week!

Best-kept secrets

CARMEL HIGH School has many hidden jewels in its student body. One of these jewels is sophomore Brandon Roberts, who has been participating in various speech contests over the past couple of years with much success.

Last year, as a freshman, Brandon entered the American Legion's speech contest. He had to give two speeches, one between eight and ten minutes long about any part of the Constitution of the United States, the second an extemporaneous presentation about any amendment.

Speech contests are divided into various levels with the degree of difficulty increasing at each step. Brandon won the first three levels of competition. Two of the levels were held in Seaside, the third in San Francisco. Brandon went on to State competition, where he placed fifth.

This year Brandon is continuing his public speaking endeavors. He entered the Veterans of Foreign War speech competition, whose topic was "Meeting America's Challenge." For this contest, Brandon sent in a tape with his speech on it. He won the first level, then placed second in the next. Again, he went on to the State competition where he earned a sixth place.

At a Lion's Club speech contest, Brandon had to speak about whether voting was a right or a responsibility. He won first place on the club level, then took a second in the area contest.

Brandon began competing last year with encouragement from his mom, a speech teacher at Seaside High School, and Mrs. Morris, an English and speech teacher at Carmel High School. "It (speaking) makes me feel more comfortable talking in front of an audience," Brandon explained.

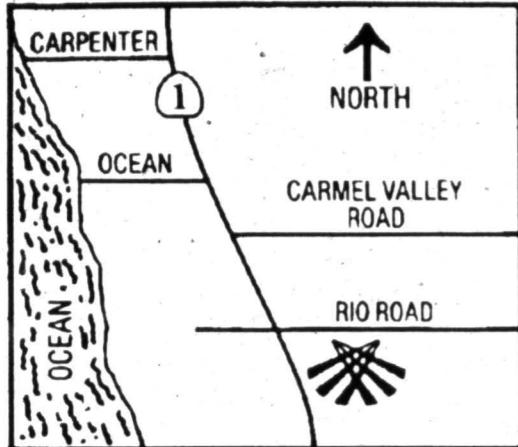

The best part of competing for Brandon is all the experience he is getting. With a smile he reveals that the prize money hasn't been altogether too bad — last year he won $900 and so far this year he's won $550 plus a plaque — on the other hand, he doesn't particularly enjoy the research that he must do for each speech.

Brandon doesn't have any idea how far this competing may take him, but he hopes it will give him an edge getting into college. He plans to continue competing in the future.

Brandon Roberts is one of Carmel High School's best-kept secrets.

Carmel Valley Ranch Resort is the only gate-guarded resort on the Monterey Peninsula. Set amid the rugged shoreline hills on 1,700 acres blessed by extraordinary natural beauty, this exclusive resort features 100 luxurious guest suites, a lodge, an 18-hole Pete Dye-designed championship golf course, tennis club with 12 courts, a free-form pool with adjoining spa, and located throughout the resort, four additional spas.

Fingerote & Fingerote, Inc. has won an international award for its advertising on behalf of Hyatt Regency Monterey.

The Monterey-based advertising and public relations agency was recognized for a 30-second television commercial entitled "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," created and produced by the agency in conjunction with the launch of Knuckles Historical Sports Bar, located at the hotel.

It was the only television commercial in the food & beverage category to have received recognition by the judges. Over 1,600 entries from around the world were reviewed in this, the oldest advertising competition of its kind.

The award was made during the Hotel Sales & Marketing Association International 35th annual Adrian Awards ceremony, recently held at the Hotel Pierre in New York City.

The commercial featured many locals as on-camera talent "lip-synching" to an upbeat version of "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" created by local music producer and entertainer, Tim Culbertson.

Carmel merchants Tom and Paula Lawler, who own Carmel Lifestyles, won a trip to the Caribbean while buying merchandise for their store in The Barnyard.

"This is a great way to start a new year," said the couple, who received the gift while registering for the Apparel Show at the L.A. Mart.

The Lawlers filled out the winning entry form and will vacation at the Four Seasons Hotel on the island of Nevis.

The public is invited to attend from 9 a.m. until noon Friday, March 20, the dealership's management invites you or one of your associates to see firsthand this reproduction model of the extraordinary new Bentley Continental R, do an interview, and create photographs or video if you wish. The event runs from 6 to 8 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

Fewer than 100 of the first year's production have been allocated to North America. All have been sold in advance.

The Continental R is the first model in 40 years that hasn't shared a body style with its Rolls-Royce counterpart," states General Manager and Carmel Valley resident Fred Willis. "Most important, it's what we call a 'sporting supercar.' It's big, supremely comfortable, and extraordinarily powerful motor car for the connoisseur." Longer and sleeker than previous models, this grand touring motor car is powered by a 6.7 liter, turbocharged V8 engine, with an electronically limited speed of 145 mph.

The Responsible Hospitality Council of Monterey County has announced the election of its first executive committee. The Monterey council evolved from a federal research project conducted in 1987. It held its first meeting in September 1989 and serves as a model for similar groups throughout the state. Funding comes from the Monterey County Department of Health. The council is a volunteer community organization that promotes responsible hospitality practices by commercial and social hosts.

Elected as chair of the council is Vince LaRocca, owner of Viva Monterey and recipient of the first decal issued by the council. LaRocca also represents the California Restaurant Association. Serving as co-chair is Rick Buvia, captain of the Monterey Police Department, and also representing Monterey county police associations. Serving as secretary is Chris von Christiernson, member of the Monterey County Alcohol Related Problem Advisory Board. Mel Nunez, manager of Bargetto winetasting room on Monterey's Cannery Row, serves as treasurer.

During its first year, the council developed a decal program for on-premise licenses such as bars, restaurants, and night clubs. To qualify for the decal, a business must demonstrate it has written policies and procedures on the service of alcoholic beverages, a manager who has been trained in a responsible beverage service program on duty at all times, and training for at least 50 percent of staff serving beer, wine or distilled spirits drinks. Standards developed by the Monterey County council are being used as a model for similar groups throughout the state. For additional information about the council, or to receive a free party planning brochure, call the council party line at 1-800-443-7277.

The Monterey Conference Center recently received the Annual Planners' Choice Award, sponsored by Meeting News magazine. The award provides an opportunity for meeting planners to acknowledge their favorites in six meeting facility categories.

Meeting News, one of the premier meeting industry publications, asks its 75,000 readers to nominate facilities on the basis of quality of facilities, ambiance, and helpfulness and efficiency of staff. A ballot with the Top 10 nominees are then submitted to the entire readership for final vote. Ballots are tabulated by an independent organization.

This year the Monterey Conference Center was voted one of the Top 3 conference centers in the United States. By receiving this award, the Monterey Conference Center shares the spotlight with such other prestigious meeting facilities as the Loew's Anatole Hotel in Dallas, the Broadmoor in Colorado Springs, the Plaza Hotel in New York, the Ritz Carlton in Atlanta, the Hyatt Regency Maui, and the Four Seasons Hotel in Dallas.

JUNG WORKSHOP SET FOR MARCH 20

How the very beginnings of Alcoholics Anonymous were influenced by the famous Swiss physician Carl C. Jung is the focus of a workshop/discussion on Friday, March 20, 7 p.m. at All Saints Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

This continues an exploration begun seven years ago by the group sponsoring the meeting: the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung, which is an informal collection of people who are discovering practical ways of using Jung's seminal ideas in their everyday lives.

Participants will have copies of the letters written by both co-founder of AA Bill Wilson and Jung.

Agenda for the meeting (titled "The Search For Spirituality - The Dilemmas and Problems Plaguing the '12 Steps'") includes discussion of what some critics term the rigidities of the 12 Steps and the possibility that too many people in need of help are turned off by their demands. Also, excerpts from "Victims, All?" a recent magazine article about codependents and the 12 Steps will help spark discussion.

Finally, the focus will turn to how Jung's insights can be used to unfetter the chains of addiction, with specific reference to each of the 12 steps.

Discussion leaders for the meeting are Joseph Pagano and David Wynne, both of Monterey.

For more information about this event or about the Friends of Jung, call or write: 649-4018; 284 Foam St. Monterey.

The growing contingent of 10- to 18-year-old male and female racquetiers, under the tutelage of John Monnier, made appearances in two regional tournaments, the William E Trenner Satellite Tournament at the Santa Clara Tennis Center and, much closer to home, at the Pebble Beach Junior Tennis Championships.

best results from the Mission Ranch crew were Tarin Vig winning his Boys 18-and-under-flight and Anna Bacler of Seaside earning her way into the tournament's top-flight finals of the Girls 18-and-under.

Vig's second-flight final scores were 6-0 and 6-2 over Timothy Roughgarden of Palo Alto.

Meanwhile, Bacler, a finalist for the overall championship, had her match against Annie Yang of Cupertino postponed because of the weather. At some future date, the match will be re-scheduled, and Bacler, only 16, will have an opportunity to garner her first trophy in the top female division. With Bacler's impressive all-court game, it could be the first of many.

Concurrent to the Pebble Beach tournament 80 miles to the north in Santa Clara a trio of male Mission Ranchers reached the finals of the 4-day William E. Trenner Tournament.

Chad Hawker of Carmel Valley came away victorious in the Boys 18-and-under with a 6-3 and 6-1 victory over Petaluma resident Brian Campoy.

Cooper Scollan of Carmel reached the finals in the Boys 16-and-under, but his match with John Cornell of Santa Clara was washed out and must be played at a later date.

As finalists in this satellite event, both Hawker and Scollan qualify for future championship tournaments.

Johnny Monnier of Pebble Beach reached his first final in the Boys 12-and-under, however came out on the short end of a 6-3 and 6-2 match against the tough Sean Dixon of San Francisco.

TREE-BENEFITING PAMPHLET AVAILABLE

Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay, a service organization of professional women, is supporting the tree-benefiting efforts of Friends of Carmel Forest in a pamphlet now being mailed to Carmel residents.

"It is the abundance of trees that help make our 'village in a forest' a place of special beauty," according to Yvonne McBride, president-elect of the Soroptimist group. "Trees purify the air we breathe, give us shade and support wildlife, and generally make Carmel a healthier and happier place to live, work and visit."

"Because trees are so important to Carmel, we wish to support the work of Friends of Carmel Forest, which is an official city support group. As the pamphlet describes, residents can help trees in several ways. They can participate in the 'Adopt A Tree' program, watering and feeding a tree near their home or place of business. They can obtain a free native tree and plant it on their property. They can join Friends of Carmel Forest or make a donation to its programs. The number to call is 626-8249.

"Residents and business people both," Mrs. McBride said, "should do all that they can to enhance and preserve the trees that make Carmel different from other beautiful coastal towns."

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Out of the wilderness

FROM TIME to time, we read a travel ad about a wilderness adventure, an African safari or a trip to the Sahara Desert. We say that this is just what we need to get away from all the trials and stresses of our hectic lives. In days of Lent, we are asked to go into the desert, not to rest and relax, but to accept a challenge.

Israel remembers well the years of her wandering in the wilderness. It was not the happiest time in her long history, but it was a time when she was near to God and He was near to her.

In the early days of the church, the wilderness was a place where men could find peace but where they were also tested and tempted. The wilderness was a place to take on evil powers that threaten the reign of peace in men's heart.

We should realize that our desert wilderness can be under our own roof. We can be tempted to become utterly self-centered and selfish—to make a Golden Calf which we adore. We can be cool to our own families, our friends and those with whom we work.

Let this Lent be challenge and let us ask ourselves this question, "Are we ready to serve? Are we ready to keep God's law of love with regard to our neighbor? Our blessed Lord was tempted in the desert for 40 days. He has promised to help us when our selfishness threatens to overwhelm us. Christ said: "Get thee behind me, Satan." We often say, "Get thee behind me, Satan." We often say, "Get thee behind me Satan and push me along." Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

What does it take to make a marriage last for 50 years or more? Fifty couples who have been married from 50 to 70 years were asked to tell why their marriages had endured. Foremost among the answers was "communication"—the willingness to talk things out. Among other reasons they cited were dating for a year or more before marriage and sharing the view that marriage is for life. The 50 happily-married couples responded to queries by the Family and Child Studies Center of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

Shelby Foote, 74, spent 20 years writing a three-volume history of the Civil War. But he wasn't prepared to become something of an instant national celebrity when he agreed to narrate and provide insights in the PBS television epic series on the war. TV apparently is "an intimate medium," he told an interviewer, "People really think you've been in the house. They say, 'We're glad to have you these past five nights. Won't you come for dinner next week?'

World Traveler film takes viewer to Brittany, Normandy

THE 1991-92 World Traveler Film Series continues at the Sunset Center on Friday, March 20 at 2 and 8 p.m. with the travel film Brittany and Normandy, produced by Frank and Athena Mugno. Mugno will be present to narrate the journey.

An accident of geography, the English Channel, split off the British Isles from the French provinces of Brittany and Normandy. An accident of history, the Norman Invasion, reunited the peoples of these lands who share the same Scandinavian stock. And in his film Brittany and Normandy, England's French Connection, Frank Mugno explores this connection and some of the many other wonders that over the centuries have flourished on this part of French soil.

The film includes spectacular photography of famous sites including the Castle of Falaise, where William the Conqueror was born; lace-making in Bayeau and Alencon; Giverny, the home and Japanese water-gardens of the impressionist painter Claude Monet; the Cathedral of Rouen, immortalized in Monet's paintings; the popular resorts of Deauville and Trouville; the D-Day landing beaches; the harbor of Dieppe; and the most breathtakingly beautiful of all walled cities, the Abbey of Le Mont-St.-Michel.

Tickets to "Brittany and Normandy" are available at the door an hour before screening. Single tickets are $5. The Sunset Center is located at Ninth and San Carlos in Carmel.

For more information call 624-3996.

County symphony to be joined by pianist Laredo in three concerts

PIANIST RUTH Laredo returns to the Monterey County Symphony to perform Sergei Rachmaninoff's "Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini" on March 22, 23 and 24.

A frequent guest of major American orchestras including those of Boston, Saint Louis, New York, and Cleveland, Laredo is a champion of new music as well as a distinguished performer of the music of Rachmaninoff, Scriabin, and Tchaikovsky.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer described her as "a dazzling virtuoso... her sound was big, her touch deep, her rhythm vital... the audience was swept away with the energy of her performance."

The performances will take place at Sunset Theater, Carmel, San Carlos at Eighth Street on Sunday, March 22, 3 p.m. and repeated on Monday, March 23.

Hailed as "America's first lady of the piano" (N.Y. Daily News), Ruth Laredo has a distinguished worldwide reputation as a leading soloist, recitalist, and recording artist. While she is particularly renowned as an interpreter of Russian and French music, and lately for her performances of works by Spanish composers, her broad repertoire ranges from Beethoven to Barber.

This work will help to inaugurate the 1992-1993 Season Subscription renewal campaign.

This concert is underwritten, in part, by Del Monte Center. Single ticket prices range from $11 to $25. Other discounts may apply. Advance purchase recommended. Call 624-8511 or 1-800-698-1311 for more information.

Pianist Maximilien plays Hidden Valley

CLASSICAL PIANIST Wanda Maximilien will present a program on Friday evening, March 20, as part of the current series at Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

Tickets for her appearance will be available at $12.50 apiece when the box office opens at 7:30 p.m. The concert will start half an hour later.

The artist began studying piano at age six in her native Port-au-Prince, Haiti, and received her MS in performance at Juilliard where she studied with Adele Marcus and Sacha Gorodnitski. Keynote magazine's critic wrote: "Each note, each chord, each phrase is in Maximilien's hands a cultured pearl, beautiful and perfectly rounded."

Hidden Valley Theater sits 11.2 miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road.

It's no mystery how authors' talk helps Carmel library succeed

WHERE CAN you get a $30 return on a $12 investment? At Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel, where the success of its "Authors-by-the-Sea" series has resulted in the purchase of over 100 new books for its patrons. With the average cost of a book hovering at about $30 by the time it is bought and processed for the library's shelves, patrons who spend $12 for each of their tickets to "Authors-by-the-Sea" are reaping a nice profit.

Although speakers for the three "Authors-by-the-Sea" held since November have been mystery writers, money collected through the sale of tickets is used to purchase books in all categories, not just mysteries.

The next "Authors-by-the-Sea" is tomorrow night at 8 when Lia Matera, Gillian Roberts, and Marilyn Wallace appear in the library's reading room. Tickets for the event are available at the library's circulation desk and only a limited number will be sold.

Matera, nominated for this year's Edgar Allan Poe Award for Prior Convictions, has written seven mystery novels featuring two series heroines, tough litigator Laura Di Palma and former radical Willa Jansson.

The editor of the five-volume "Sisters in Crime" anthology series, Wallace is the author of three novels featuring homicide detectives Jay Goldstein and Carlos Cruz. She is also the co-editor with Robert J. Randisi of Deadly Allies.

Roberts, author of three mystery novels about a Philadelphia school teacher, also writes under her real name of Judy Greber. As Greber, she has penned three novels, including Mendocino.

The trio of writers, none of whom live locally, will be staying at Holiday House of Carmel and dining at Cafe Berlin, thanks to the generosity of the establishments' owners.

Light refreshments prepared by the library staff will be served following the question and answer portion of the program.

Theater Review

By James P. Kinney

A wild, delightful surprise

"MARTYRDOM IS the only way to achieve immortality without requiring any special ability," sniffs Gen. John Burgogne at the news that a Yankee hostage selected to be shot as a warning to other colonial wannabes has willingly embraced his fate.

George Bernard Shaw, of course, is at it again, this time in his The Devil's Disciple, which opened the past weekend at Carmel's Indoor Forest Theatre.

As Director Marcia Hovick points out in her program notes, this is the 16th production by her Staff Players Repertory Theatre of the prolific and irreverent Shaw's plays which — in their unique blend of humor and wisdom — made G.B.S. arguably the greatest and most influential English-writing playwright of our waning 20th century.

The year is 1777. Major Swindon (Steve Harris), an obtuse British Army officer garrisoned in a New England town, is arbitrarily selecting, then hanging Yankee Puritans to discourage the American Revolution. Mrs. Dudgeon (Louise Nachman), a Puritan sourpuss and recent widow, fears that her free-thinking son Richard (Kit McKinney) will be next. Her fears are not unfounded since Uncle Peter Dudgeon has already been executed.

Richard Dudgeon shows up at the reading of his father's will. Although his irreverent words and insolent manner shock and infuriate his stiff-necked relatives — he mockingly refers to himself as "The Devil's Disciple" — the generous-spirited local minister, Rev. Anderson (Keith Decker) invites him to his home.

While Anderson is unexpectedly called away, a British Sergeant (Ellis Albee), forces his way into the Anderson home and — believing Dudgeon to be the minister — hauls him away to be hung as a hostage. The minister's new, young wife, Judith (Suzanne Crain), tries to correct the mistake but is quickly, humorously silenced by Dudgeon.

When the minister returns and hears from his terrified wife what has transpired, he animatedly makes preparations to leave. Mistaking his sudden departure as cowardly flight, Judith — grudgingly impressed with Dudgeon's courage — visits him in the stockade where he awaits execution and falls in love with him.

Eventually, the urbane, disillusioned Gen. Burgogne comes upon the scene and Shaw — with great wit and effortless charm — sorts out the ticklish mess so that all ends happily.

Again, in her notes, Director Hovick welcomes nine newcomers into the Disciple cast and it is clear from the start that this is community theater at its best and most challenging. It seemed evident that a few of the onstage performers' last outing on the boards may have been in the fourth-grade Spring Pageant playing the part of the fourth tree on the left or in the fifth-grade Christmas show when coerced into portraying the third angel on the right, trembling, sweating and holding it until the final curtain.

But, then, that is what community theater is all about, isn't it? From actors with extensive professional experience to those just described with every gradation in-between, the results may be uneven. We can expect slips, gaffes, conflicting styles and every once in a while — wow! — a wild, delightful surprise.

Nachman's Mrs. Dudgeon, while consistent, was too harsh, too unpleasant to carry the characteristically light Shavian touch. As Essie, the rejected teenager, Rebecca Meyer needs to show more graduated emotion as she moves from misery through hope through belief to joyful realization that Dudgeon can lead her through to acceptance. Alert audiences love gradual changes.

Peter Hill's loud, relentless density owes too much to The Simpsons, too little to Shaw. Lighten him up; soften him down. Even idiots reflect diversity, as seen in recent political candidates' debates.

Keith Decker's Anderson is solid and nuanced. I would have liked him softer throughout and more composed in the final scene.

Suzanne Crain's Judith is effective but the complex emotions in this very difficult role require even more shading and subtlety. The role begs to be grown into throughout the run.

Tom Burns' shows a good comic touch as the punctilious, fussy Mr. Hawkins. I thought at first it was another Bush impression, but it turned out much cleverer than that. Ivan Flansburg had a great deal of indecent droll fun as William.

Kit McKinney's portrayal of Richard in the lead role was appealing and self-possessed though not always consistent. Keep in mind that the listening onstage is just as important as the moving or the talking. Unpredictable audiences look anywhere.

Steve Harris delivered an oily Swindon. I wanted the British accent more consistent. Karner Benjamin as Gen. Burgogne was wonderful — droll, magnanimous and delicately condescending in that impeccable Hi-Brit accent. Great in-the-wings learning available here. Sum-up:

A fun evening of Shaw.

Musical cravings

IF YOU can't find a musical genre to satisfy your cravings this week, you must be into some strange ritualistic Iranian bouzouki music, because there's something for virtually everyone.

We've got reggae, ska, Christian rap, folk, zydeco, country-rock, punkabilly, roadhouse rockabilly, blues boogie and some others that defy categorization.

To satisfy your reggae/ska mojo, there's a variety to choose from, including Campbell-based reggae band Uprising, playing at 9 p.m. Friday, March 20 at Shanty Malone's.

This is a band that's opened for Black Uhuru, Pato Banton, Tippa Irie & Peter Spence and have held their own. The band features a couple of former members of Thaddeus as well as Peabo Bryson's former drummer and features soulful harmonies and tight arrangements of both originals and reggae classics. Tickets are only $5 in advance, $7 at the door.

THE STRANGERS, a Bay Area folk-rock band that has been described as a cross between the Grateful Dead and Elvis Costello, plays Shanty Malone's in Carmel Valley at 9 p.m. Thursday, March 19. Cover is $5. For info or reservations, call 626-0604.

For your ska fix, there's The URJ, a popular surf-ska band from Santa Cruz that often packs The Catalyst for its weekly Dollar Nights. They're also at Shanty Malone's (is this place becoming the roots-reggae-ska capital of the peninsula or what?), at 9 p.m. Saturday, March 21. Cover is $5.

Of course local reggae band Jonah & the Whale Watchers continue to play local venues, including The Club on Thursday, March 26.

As for the Christian rap portion of the menu, there's Dave, Max and Kenny from Sacramento, better known as J.C. Crew. If you have to ask what the J.C. stands for you're not paying attention. They'll appear in concert at 5 p.m. Sunday, March 22 at the PG Middle School Auditorium at 835 Forest Ave. Tickets are $7 for students in advance or at the door and $10 at the door for adults; doors open at 4.

This is the perfect show for those parents turned off by the often violent and mysoginistic lyrics of street or gangsta rap so current with kids these days.

The show is being produced by M & A Production, the same folks who mount those excellent gospel shows featuring the Mighty Clouds of Joy and others. J.C. Crew records for Pakaderm Records out of Dana Point.

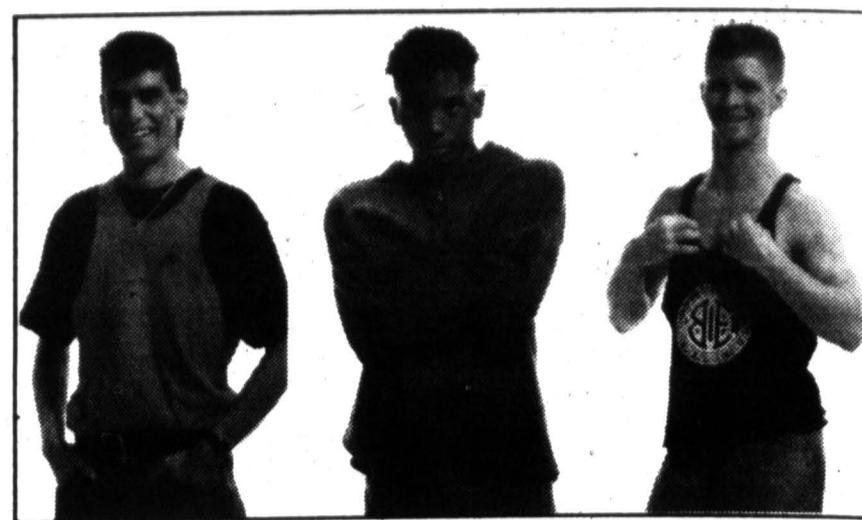

The show also features T-Bone, a bilingual rap recording artist, with emcee Melvin Jr. For information or tickets call 899-3950.

For high-octane roots rock melded with rockabilly you can't go wrong with either Santa Cruz' Big Medicine Head, who'll appear March 19 at The Catalyst for Dollar Night and Thursday, March 26, in a rare Monterey Peninsula appearance, at Doc Ricketts' Lab, or The Beat Farmers, the wildest roots rock band around, at The Catalyst, Friday, March 20. Even Dave Letterman has jumped on the Farmers' bandwagon, quipping after the band appeared on his show that he'd like to go on the road with the boys. Bring your raincoats and drinking goggles, it's going to be a wild ride.

And speaking of wild rides, the hottest zydeco band extant, Terrance Simien and the Mallet Playboys, makes a return appearance to Dock Ricketts' Lab, Wednesday, March 25, perhaps a tad late for Mardi Gras, but who's complaining?

EIGHT-SECOND RIDE

Simien, who's part of the Miller Genuine Draft Band Network, is the future of zydeco. Only in his mid-20s, he's managed to blaze a trail for himself with his unique rockin', bluesy brand of zydeco that others are only now following. He broke in big time when he appeared in the 1985 film The Big Easy with Dennis Quaid and Ellen Barkin, performing in a nightclub scene and co-writing a song with Quaid. His scorching zydeco song Oh Yeh, Yeh was perhaps the highlight of that film's soundtrack album.

It wasn't until 1990, however, that he released his first full album, Zydeco on the Bayou on Restless/Enigma, and it's a bayou-burner, hotter and sweatier than a July day in Mallet, Louisiana, his hometown. Which is what it'll be like at Doc's once he gets the band revved up and the crowd worked into a frenzy. To paraphrase John Hiatt et al, once you get there you're gonna want to use your feet.

UPCOMING EVENTS with a musical bent on the Monterey Peninsula and outlying areas:

• Other shows at Shanty Malone's include swamp boogie with The Sundogs, Friday, March 27; a country-folk benefit Saturday, March 28; a jazz-arama benefit set for Sunday, March 29; East Bay ska-reggae band Skankin' Pickle on Friday, April 3; and New Age artist Alex DeGrassi and our own Alisa Fineman on April 4. For more information on shows at Shanty Malone's, call 626-0604.

• Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row has: fusion keyboardist Tom Grant on Monday, March 30; alternative roots rockers Big Medicine Head, Thursday, March 26; blues-rock guitarist Tinsley Ellis Wednesday, April 1; comedian Ellen DeGeneris does a rare comedy show Saturday, April 4; blues guitarist Debbie Davies returns April 6; Chris Cain band is set for April 14; blues band Hook & the Hitchhikers blows into town April 21.

Local bands performing over the next week include Eight Second Ride playing country on March 18; Lovers & Strangers rock out March 19; Rock & Roll Rodeo play March 20-21; The Lazy Hurricanes play Sunday, March 22; Terry Hanck & the Soulrockers play March 23-24; and Lovers & Strangers are back Friday, March 27.

Info on all shows can be had by calling 649-4241.

• Portofino Cafe in PG will feature New Mexico folk singer Sid Houseman in concert Thursday, March 19 at 8. Cover: $5. On Friday, March 20, singer-songwriter Susan Udell and 12-string finger stylist Gregory Ramirez join voices and hearts in a performance, "Songs from the Heart," at 8 for a $6 cover. Santa Cruz singer-songwriter Aileen Vance then comes in for a 8 p.m. show Saturday, March 21, singing songs from her new CD After the Night. T.R. Ritchie opens. That's a $7 cover. By the way, Ritchie, a Seattle-based folksinger, headlines his own show at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 26. His new release is Not Just Another Pretty Folksinger.

For reservations or further information about concerts at Portofino, call 373-7379.

• Country-rock band Eight-Second Ride out of the Salinas area plays Doc's March 18 for that venue's new Country Western night as well as at Shanty Malone's Wednesday, March 25. The band, with vocalist/guitarist Candie Cobb leading the way (she's performed with Merle Haggard among others), plays everything from country standards from Haggard, George Jones and Patsy Cline to "country"-rock from the likes of Eric Clapton, Steve Miller and The Stones (what, you don't think Honky Tonk Woman is country enough?) Shanty's seems like the perfect venue for a versatile band like that. By the way, the 8-second ride refers to a perfect ride for a bronc or bull buster at a rodeo. E-hah!

• Jonah and the Whale Watchers play The Club of Monterey Thursday, March 26, with Urban Tribe opening, for that nightclub's new weekly reggae nights. The band also plays The Club again April 23 and the Monterey Brewing Company on April 28.

For more info on the band and its availability, call Coco at 625-5260.

• Upcoming shows at The Catalyst in Santa Cruz include: Big Medicine Head (March 19 — Dollar Night); Beat Farmers (March 20); John Lee Hooker (March 21); Ferron (March 22); Chris Cain Band (March 26 — Dollar Night); Roy Rogers & the Delta Rhythm Kings (March 27); Jefferson Starship (March 28); Ice-T (March 31 — a 16-and-over show at 8 p.m.); Dynatones (April 2 — Dollar Night); Pele Juju (April 3); Square Roots (April 4); Marys Danish (April 5); and Social Distortion (April 26).

Tickets are available at all BASS/TM outlets (including The Wherehouse on Lighthouse Avenue in New Monterey and at The Crossroads). Info for Catalyst shows can be had by calling 423-1336. The Catalyst is located at 1011 Pacific Ave. in downtown Santa Cruz.

• The lineup for both Paul Masson and Villa Montalvo summer series have been released; more on that in next week's column.

Humor key to this workshop

IS IT really OK to take time to laugh in the Nervous Nineties? Absolutely! It's more important than ever. On March 21, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Ina Hillebrandt will bring her Comic Release Un-Workshop to the Inn at Spanish Bay.

Comic Release reveals how laughter is a potent antidote for healing stress, enhancing personal and professional relationships, and increasing productivity. Participants will see how to take more "humor breaks" to relieve tension and anger and improve problem-solving skills.

Hillebrandt, workshop leader and President of the Un-Workshops in Carmel, is nationally recognized for her insight into human development and terrific sense of humor. Her new book Diving Boards, is the first in a series of humorous self-growth books.

Westerman's works

AN EXHIBITION of recent paintings by Arne Westerman will open with a reception from 1 to 6 p.m. Saturday, March 21 at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth and Mission in Carmel. Westerman, a native of Oregon, is known for his richly colored depictions of people in seemingly candid moments, in a brilliant style and intensity not often found in watercolor paintings. He has won numerous awards and his works have been featured in a variety of publications, including Southwest Art and Northwest Gallery magazines.

Group scenes

CARMEL'S GALLERY Americana will hold a reception for a group exhibit by three artists, Edward Szmyd, Gene Guilbord, and Elvio Mainardi, from 3 to 7 p.m. Saturday, March 21 at the gallery, located at Lincoln and Sixth in Carmel. Shown is Elvio Mainardi's "Naturamorta Contraluce." For more information on the reception, artists or exhibit, call 624-5071.

Nick Williams offers free jazz concert at Vista Lobos

NICK WILLIAMS Music offers another free jazz concert on Thursday night, March 19, in the Vista Lobos Room of Carmel's Vista Lobos Park (Third and Torres).

He says the 90-minute presentation will start at 7 p.m. and feature himself on reeds and bass, drummer Marty Bartoli, Bucky Boyne at the piano, bassist Carl LoSchiavo and guests. And five-year-old Angelica Williams will sing, according to Nick.

The series is sponsored by his business and Carmel Recreation Department. Reservations: 626-9151.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

When pals need help

SPAWNED BY shallow movies and novels, the popular image of jazz musicians still insists these dedicated individuals carry torment and encapsulation like sandbags round their necks. The image says they're little more than talented children—secretive, obsessive, socially unpromising. Selfish, in a word.

The reality? When pals need help, jazz players and fans very often stand amongst the planet's most generous respondents. An excellent example emerges locally.

Shanty Malone's — family-run restaurant at Valley Hills Center — rather struggles to maintain its live music policy in today's hardball economy. And so jazz pianist Bobby Phillips announces a benefit that hopefully will fatten what he calls "the talent fund."

Bobby lays it all out this way: the month's final Sunday (3/29) will contain a 12-hour continuous Jazz-orama over there. Between 40-50 performers will volunteer services and qualify as Friends of Shanty Malone's.

Primary organizer Phillips says the bash will run from noon till midnight with the door charge being $10 per. Buffet food service will be available for another $10 apiece.

He adds that internationally-praised pianist and composer Milcho Leviev will play a 9 p.m. set. Stuart Zimny on bass and drummer Johnny Goldsmith round out the trio.

"Milcho has friends in Carmel Valley and loved playing at Shanty Malone's on two past occasions," Bobby says. "Though he lives in Southern California, he'll come here from San Francisco where he's writing music for a production of American Conservatory Theater."

Also appearing: Brazilian keyboardist Weber Drummond's Zen Blend with Brian Stock, Joseph Lucido, Dennis Murphy, Kenny Stahl, Pat Tregenza. And Todd and Steve Clickard, Andy Weis, Jake Stock and those Abalone Stompers, Lee Lambert, Lee Durley, Bryan McConnell, Loren Pickford (back here now from touring), Norm Ross, on and on.

"A specific schedule will be available by your next column deadline," Phillips promises. "There will be two stages—and absolutely no waiting time between bands."

Info: 626-0604 (Shanty Malone's) or 625-1850 (Bob Phillips).

ALSO BACK home today from her latest European tour — jazz flutist Ali Ryerson. The Carmel Valley resident will play a concert Saturday night (3/21) at Church of Religious Science in downtown Monterey (400 West Franklin). The event carries an eight o'clock start time plus $8 door charge.

Working with Ali there will be longtime partner Charles Loos on piano, bassist McConnell, Tregenza at his trusty drums. And she says refreshments will be served.

JUST AS if it were planned....

While The Mambo Kings pulls rave reviews from film critics, one of Latin music's bright stars will be the special guest at the Sunday Afternoon Jazz Series produced by reedman John Cortes for Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row (3/22). Working with the Cortes house band will be the knockout vibist and percussionist John Rae. Believe it or not, the door charge will hold at that modest $3 per between two and six o'clock.

Rae has toured with Cal Tjader, George Shearing, Herbie Mann, Vince Guaraldi, Jackie and Roy, Charlie Byrd. He has more than 40 album credits with folks like Tjader, Stan Getz, Mann. Other engagements: Joe Pass, Herb Ellis, Milt Jackson, Kai Winding, Barney Kessel.

His talents have served TV, radio, symphonic organizations, live theater. Rae's also a well-known clinician at percussion conclaves and an author of books on jazz phrasing for mallets and Latin drum techniques.

Last week, local PR pro Jess Knubis furnished a delightful surprise when the Lab housed that CD Release Party for pianist Ace Hill. Jess occupied an onstage stool and played extremely tasty guitar licks throughout the jam session. He reminded this listener of Barry Galbraith — the session guitarist during those New York '50s.

Strong vibist Bill Jackson, McConnell and drummer Bob Blankenship formed the basic unit with Ace. Lee Durley's vocals drew much applause from the packed place. Others who sat in: Gary Rossi and Jan Deneau at the piano, Cortes, Pickford, Stahl, Norm Ross, the fine percussionist Macucho Bonilla.

Venue owner Kelly Leonard now places nightclub tables near the bandstand — fact which contributed

Alien anthropology

THE MPC players at Cherry Hall are doing Tales of the Lost Formicans by Constance Congdon. The premise is that we Earthlings have been monitored by alien anthropologists who are now relating their findings to their world. The setting is in the recent American Suburban past — rich with comedic possibilities. The aliens are dressed in black body suits and wear sunglasses with silver chains dangling in front instead of being worn over the neck as humans will do. This immediately establishes them as scientists who are slow learners.

The opening scene is quite funny. The aliens speculate on the design and function of a formica-and-chrome kitchen set from the 50s. We almost all used one of these at some time in our lives, so this is a good opener. They are unsure as to the purpose of the (ostensibly built-in) wobble of the table. As the play progresses we are treated to vignettes of human behavior with amusing "scientific" comment by an off-stage alien voice (nicely done by Denise Clifford). Occasionally, the aliens make a visitation, for instance, to gather human semen for study. Not to worry, this scene is very tastefully done.

Jerry, ably played by Kevin Hanstick, is the lucky donor. (The prospect of Hanstick's genes improving the stock of this rather dour and hapless race is encouraging.)

There is female humor, adolescent surliness, geriatric humor, male surliness, and poignancy at all ages levels. Example: Eric accuses his mother of having fun while he was conceived. Mother says it wasn't all that much fun. Eric says, "Well, imagine me doubling in cells every second: 2, 4, 8, 16 and beyond, not knowing what's going on!" Or another scene where the grandmother wakes up in a strange motel room with a bald-headed sleeping cowboy and can't find her clothes. She sneaks out with his cowboy boots, shirt, and hat to go home. Youthful anguish. Mature loneliness. Only a sample of the powerful material at work here.

However, as the vignettes unfold, they get darker and alien comment is rarely supplied. I found this unsettling. It's like starting to watch the Coneheads and suddenly finding yourself in the middle of Tennessee Williams. I enjoyed the play but it required more gear shifting than I've done since double-clutching my old Studebaker. The cast carries it off with aplomb but we are left a little nonplussed. Also, much of the humor is not of the boffo variety but rather the warm glow kind and that makes one more vulnerable to the bathos.

Excellent cast

The cast is very good. The female roles consist of a grandmother sensitively played by Doris Silver, her daughter Cathy played with fine intensity by Lyn Whiting, and Cathy's friend the "zaftig" Judy played by MaryAnn Lucido who energizes every scene she's in. The males are the grandfather played as ethereally as only Phil Pratt can; Jerry (Kevin Hanstick), a stargazer who makes the closest of encounters with the aliens; Eric (the teenager from Hell) who is Cathy's son, forcefully done by David Vega, and Hank, played by Joe Strang who nicely covers three other minor roles, as well.

Conrad Selvig directs the piece with great confidence which adds to the twinges we feel when the gears are shifted. ("They know what they're doing; what's my problem?," "I found myself thinking.") The first Selvig production I ever saw was All Night Long at MPC about twelve years ago. It is also an outrageous otherworldly fantasy. It also filled me with a sense of puzzled wonderment like Formicans does, and I was very glad to have seen it. This is another one of those experiences.

Selvig also designed an austere set so as not to distract from the amusing props and costumes. Thomas Burks designed the audio and ran the sound board. Roger Thompson designed the lighting and Jessica Hanna skillfully worked the console. The properties mistress was Alana Brown and you can tell she had fun with this project.

The script, I have concluded, is the ultimate source of the dislocation. Because we lose the alien perspective on the darkest of scenes, which would mitigate them, we are forced abruptly back on conventional interpretive devices. Also, there are some comic possibilities that are begging to be dealt with but are missed. A bit of rewriting could solve these problems and make it more uniformly enjoyable, but also less gripping. It's almost two plays in one. At its funniest it reminds me of "Monty Python Anthropology." I remember those cocksure scientists (played usually by Eric Idle) who wrongly but zestfully reported their "findings" on British behavior to a greatly amused TV audience.

By all means see this play, and hurry, it only runs one more weekend — Friday and Saturday the 20th and 21st at 8 p.m., Sunday the 22nd at 7 p.m. Cherry Hall is at Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel. Tickets can be had through the MCTA Box Office at 655-3200.

A positive thinker

Unfinished Dream by Red Callender with Elaine Cohen. Quartet Books. 239 pages. $25.

THE POINT'S made, it seems, every time we turn around. Artists of the older generation need our affectionate thanks while they're still here. Jazz giant Red Callender died March 8 at his home in Saugus (Los Angeles County) from complications of thyroid cancer. He was 76.

At least this master bassist, tuba player, composer and studio musician got to complete his rich autobiography and see it published with the help of San Francisco writer and jazz buff Elaine Cohen.

What a treat it was when Red put in a surprise appearance at last year's Monterey Bay Blues Festival, playing his mellow old standup bass behind vocalist Charles Brown. After the set, Callender greeted us most graciously — jazz photographer Will Wallace and me — and told backstage stories and gave signed copies of the book.

His lovely wife was there too, she who wrote lyrics for some of Red's tunes. The lady urged her mate to rest before other musicians crowded in with ideas about the evening meal and a jam session somewhere. This week she said: "I had Red at home (from the hospital) the last month. I'm getting used to not being busy. The book? He loved doing it. People can order copies directly from me: Mary Lou Callender, 6325 Quail Road, Saugus 91350. The price ($25 per) includes tax and mailing. Red was cremated, you know. We'll have a memorial service very shortly...."

That volume describes Red's "musical world" — a fascinating place indeed. After all, Callender was still a teenager when he made his recording debut with Louis Armstrong. And it was Red who gave future giant Charles Mingus his bass-playing lesson number one (Mingus was 17 at the time).

Red was one of the first African American musicians to break the Hollywood studio color barrier (1950s). He worked extensively in TV and movies. He cut records with the best: Duke Ellington, Lester Young, Charlie Parker, Dexter Gordon, Nat Cole, so many others.

"My mother often used the phrase 'divine order' to explain how faith works in this world," Callender writes early on. "Others may call it luck, some call it destiny. I prefer to call it positive thinking. Positive thinking is the key that opens doors."

About the myth-sized Lester: "Everything he said was almost in code; he had his own private language. 'Where's your pound cake?' meant where's your wife or girlfriend. To Lester, pound cake was so rich, you couldn't get any better than that.... He'd comment on everyone, though he'd never poke fun at people in a cruel manner. Lester was an extremely sensitive human being who bruised easily."

About heroin: "Some musicians thought it made them play better, got rid of their inhibitions. Thought they got rid of their inhibitions. There were a few bass players that got hooked on junk; they didn't live very long either. My contention was, and is, that I need all the energy and awareness I have to play the instrument."

Along with countless insights and valuable portraits of jazz legends, the book offers rare photographs: Mingus after his first bass lesson (1938), great bassist Walter Page (late '30s), Buck Clayton Band with Herschel Evans and Teddy Buckner (1936), jam sessions with great players like Frank Morgan and Gerald Wiggins and Big Sid Catlett (early '40s), in the radio studio with San Francisco's Vernon Alley (1953), Josephine Baker (1950), so on. Treasures all....

The selected Callender discography (1937-84) will amaze. And for the musicians, Red includes musical examples of his skill as a jazz composer.

Throughout, his wisdom keeps the beat: "We dressed sharp in those days. Now that I was one of the musicians, I had to live up to the image. Believe me, when you're poor you pay far more attention to how you're dressed than when you've made it."

Wonderful stuff.

BARBARA MURPHY'S Portofino Cafe in Pacific Grove will hold another Open Poetry Reading next week (Wednesday night 3/25). Signups begin at 7:30. It's $2 per adult and $1 to students.

PILGRIM'S WAY Bookstore in downtown Carmel will welcome David Cushing Fuess as part of its ongoing lecture series (Wednesday night 3/25). Topic:

Cherry Foundation spotlights art from high schoolers

REVIEW
By JOHN DETRO

ERSATZ PRIMITIVES be damned — the true motion of searching may be sensed as well as seen at Carmel's Carl Cherry Foundation through March 27.

That handsome space (Fourth and Guadalupe) offers its fifth annual show of works by high school students from the peninsula as well as Salinas.

"All public, parochial and independent schools were invited to submit pieces in any media," said Foundation Administrator Robert Reese. "There were 104 entries picked by art teachers. Due to space limitations, our Exhibits Committee pared down the total. The final count's

74 items (from Carmel High School, Pacific Grove High, PG Community, Cypress, Marina La Via, Monterey, Santa Catalina, Robert Louis Stevenson, Seaside, York, Salinas, Palma, Alisal High)."

Technique emerges

Technical knowhow comes at the viewer most strongly off of often dramatic black-and-white photographs. A striking shot by Carmel High junior Guy Keir — his face superimposed upon a weathered tree — graced the show invitations sent out by Reese early this month. It's even more fascinating in full size. Good dreamscape.

Also from Carmel High, Kristen Snyder contributes a monoprint which rather represents the entire show — nascent formality, entirely subjective glyphs and pictorial giggles defining themselves via the spatial field. We get to see these young workers pursue their metaphors and obsessions; Cherry Foundation deserves thanks for taking the hunts seriously.

John Peyton Perry from PG Community puts forth a strong pencil portrait of a strong female face. He's beginning to see that the human visage is a layered wonder — something from his subject's inner life whispers ever so slightly across the topmost planes.

Adventure with light

Working in acrylics and pastels, York School's Laura Haney took on Master Study — Rembrandt. This gutsy attempt concentrates on one of the great painter's self-portraits; it shows us how light and shadow dance constantly and define us thereby.

Generally, the exhibit proves that these students are looking at things rather than merely taking them for granted. This isn't the same as vision, but one starts where one stands, right?

The artistic fevers and leaps of faith will come later. Right now, the teenagers can say they're moving toward commitment — and that they live in an area

YOUTHFUL EFFORTS — This photograph by Carmel's Guy Keir is part of the fifth annual High School Art Exhibit at Cherry Foundation. The wide-ranging show runs through March 27. Information: 624-7491.

Art Notes

By Sam Colburn

A romantic attraction

THE MONTEREY Peninsula and south to Big Sur has been called the greatest meeting of land and sea in the world. What effect has this had on the art and artists of the area?

It is my feeling that this was, and still is, a very romantic attraction. In the beginning there were the sardines and the sea, pine forests, steep cliffs leading down to the restless water, and fog. These are still here with the exception of the sardines, but the lure of discovery has left us, and yet it is still a fascinating terrain.

There are artists in Watts and East Los Angeles, but they are concerned with what they see and feel there, and maybe their art is more important because of that. The big galleries in New York and Los Angeles are not concerned with what is happening on this island of art.

The artists who live here are, in a way, fortunate that they are not subject to the movements that stir artists in the urban areas. We are more free to develop our own original imagery.

Over at the Pacific Grove Art Center, the David Gill Gallery has been transformed by Elizabeth Murray, expressing her reaction to Monet's garden. There are many hand-painted, manipulated photographs. She also shows three-dimensional works, plant forms, and flowers. I liked the five panels entitled "Diptych Jardin du Luminaire."

Viewers may also look through colored glasses to see color changes, and also follow the extraordinary patterns in a kaleidoscope. Her series 54 to 58 is quite different from the other pieces. Actually the whole installation is a display of amazing virtuosity. Her imagery is innovative and charming.

Mary Gamble is showing her watercolors in the hallways. I liked the abstract patterns set up in "Goats," and "Dog and Cat." This patterning is again evident in "Gaspard's Orchard." She has painted in the Southwest and "Bryce Canyon" captures the heat of that area. She has humor, too, as is shown in "The Photographer." Her approach here is reminiscent of Norman Rockwell.

Over in the Elmarie Dyke Gallery are the oils of Peggy Wynne Borgman, some on canvas and some on paper. Perhaps unknown to her, there is a hidden nude in "Artichoke Road, Summer." Her "Moonrise; Carmel River Beach" is nostalgic. I like the upright tree forms in "Pinnacles, Late Spring." "Waddell Creek Bridge" is rich and luminous. Some of her patterning is too strong for the picture area.

The current exhibit will be shown through April 10.

Miguel Dominguez is featured in a one-man show at the Carmel Art Association. He is a very adept painter, using watercolor and gouache for fresh impressions of nature. There is one exception to that in his "Mendocino Whitewash," where there is a sharp contrast between the building and the surrounding foliage. He is very good in his presentation of fog. We see this in his "Red Patch" and in "Yellow Crimson."

His blues really recede and are brilliant in "Blue Season." The butterfly in "Spring Visitor" is so real it looks as if it would take off if you got too close. There is a bird in "December Flock" that is elegant and almost ethereal. Perhaps the most effective piece for me is his "Rainwatchers." It is my feeling that he uses the space in a more plastic development of form in this one.

In the foyer there is a fluid oil, "Navajo Vista," by Everett Norton Ward. I had not seen any other paintings in this medium by this artist.

In the main gallery there are sculptures by Kathleen Crocetti. I am amazed with her wedding of "steel and stone." Eileen Auvil is also showing her attenuated figures as acrobats. Perhaps there is some influence of Giacometti here.

These works will be on view through April 1.

Learn how to become a 'Big Buddy'

The Buddy Program of the Monterey Peninsula, an agency that matches adult companions with children from single parent families, will conduct orientations the second Tuesday of every month. Orientations take place 7 to 9 p.m. at Mariposa Hall, 801 Lighthouse Ave., New Monterey. This is an opportunity for those interested in volunteering with the Buddy Program to learn more about the roles, responsibilities and rewards of being a "Big Buddy." For details, call 655-9231.

Coming up at the same room on Wednesday night (3/25) — Terrance Simien and his Mallet Playboys. Tickets cost $8 per; first set at nine o'clock.

MONTEREY BAY Blues Festival presents a fund-raiser dance on Saturday night (3/21) at Seaside's Oldemeyer Center. Playing will be Bobby Reed and the Surprize Band.

The word was "limited seating" for the 9 p.m.-1 a.m. bash. Tickets ($15 each) will be available at the door with proceeds serving the MBBF Scholarship Fund.

Sunday afternoon (3/29) for the John XXIII AIDS Ministry. The two-hour concert has a three o'clock start time. Intermission refreshments were promised as part of the $6 door charge.

Though he works in the San Francisco Bay Area, Scotty hasn't forgotten his hometown — Seaside. So far he has written more than 50 tunes. One critic reacted to Scotty's first LP this way: "He's a nimble bopper and his scatting has the fluidity of a good horn solo...."

FUTURE FILE: The fifth annual Fats Waller Memorial Jazz Festival in Watsonville will offer 17 trad bands come June (6/26-28). Included will be the popular Beverly Hills Unlisted crew led by Conrad Janis. So says fest organizer Alice Leyland.

Alice stresses that famed stride pianist Ralph Sutton again will headline: "He'll perform some twin piano sets with his talented sister, Barbara Sutton Curtis."

The six-hour Pianorama will happen on the Saturday. Sunday morning gospel services will feature Watsonville's own Mt. Olive Temple Church of God's 16-member choir — "back by popular demand." Ticket costs and other data may be had by calling 1-728-3948.

THE EXCELLENT band Bebop and Beyond will be spotlighted Monday night (3/23) at Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz. It's $10 advance (Ticketmaster) or $12 at the door; eight o'clock kick.

Personnel: Mel Martin (reeds), Warren Gale (trumpet), Randy Vincent (guitar), Jeff Chambers (bass), Donald Bailey (drums). Their latest release comes from the Blue Moon label and celebrates the music of Dizzy Gillespie.

Over at The Catalyst, the masterful John Lee Hooker is scheduled on Saturday night (3/21). And on Thursday's Dollar Night (3/26) — Chris Cain.

Leave it and let it be

HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.

This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you...

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrestor screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house.

Remember. Only you can prevent forest fires.

Woodsy Owl for Clean Water

Give a hoot. Don't pollute.

Forest Service, U.S.D.A.

Protect the little critters living in the forest.

All it takes is one match. Thrown thoughtlessly in the forest. And the little critters who make the forest their playground will never play again.

Remember. Only you can prevent forest fires.
